OTTAWA TALK IS SCHEDULED BY ROOSEVELT

COMPLETE HARMONY IS REPORTED IN WAR STRATEGY

BY JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

Quebec, Aug. 20. (AP)—President Roosevelt will address an informal meeting of the Canadian parliament at Ottawa Wednesday, following conclusion of the high strategy conference here in which he and Prime Minister Churchill are working in "complete harmony" and making excellent progress.

Plans for the speech were announced officially late today at the same time that a Citadel spokesman gave the first picture of how the chief executive and prime minister are putting in their time.

Mr. Roosevelt and Churchill set such a pace last night, by working until 2:30 a. m., that today they were completely caught up on current tasks. This enabled them to go on a picnic and fishing trip, with members of their immediate parties, to an unidentified lake about 50 miles north of here.

Hull Joins Group

This evening they swung back into conference routine at a dinner with Secretary of State Hull and Britain's Foreign Minister Anthony Eden. Hull joined the Quebec group during the afternoon, his presence here dramatizing half a dozen urgent political problems, directly grown out of the war, for which solutions of one sort or another must be found.

Foremost among these problems, in the opinion of many here, is the matter of closer coordination with Russia in the campaigns—apparently soon to be undertaken for final fvictory in Europe.

Announcement of the president's Ottawa plans was made at a press conference by Canadian, British and American spokesmen. Stephen Early, one of President Roosevelt's secretaries, was authority for information about how the chief executive and prime minister worked until the small hours this morning to wipe their schedule clean of all matters requiring their attention up to that time.

On To Washington

Asked whether that meant "complete harmony" marked the endeavors of the two chiefs of state, Early replied that that was "entirely so."

President Roosevelt's speech at Ottawa, Early said, will be brief and will be broadcast. It will be delivered about noon, E. W. T. on Parliament Hill outdoors, in a spot where the parliament buildings form three sides of a rectangle around a green lawn large enough to accommodate three or four football fields. Thus, in addition to the members of the senate and house of commons, thousands of citizens will be able to see and hear him.

The president, Early said, does not expect to come back to Quebec from the Canadian capital. Instead he will move "in the direction of Washington." He will be in Ottawa only one day. These plans indicated that the conference among the principals, including Prime Minister W. L. MacKenize King of Canada, would wind up Tuesday at the latest, with a joint press conference and the issuing of a formal statement.

No announcement was made of Mr. Churchill's schedule after that time. But the Canadian prime minister will accompany the president to Ottawa.

Political Experts Confer

Secretary Hull's arrival highlighted half a dozen war-born political matters, arrived here two days after Anthony Eden. Britain's foreign secretary. Because of his first-hand understanding of Moscow and his contacts there, Eden's participation in the discussions suggested even more strongly than that of Hull's the amount of attention currently paid ques-

Soviet Paper Sees Way To Quick Victory

BY HENRY C. CASSIDY

Moscow, Aug. 20 (AP)—The Soviet labor magazine "War and the Working Class' called today for a three-power conference of Britain, Russia and the United States with the aims of shortening the war and preparing for peace on the basis of friendly collaboration among the allies.

In an editorial entitled "Quebec and the Soviet Union," the magazine said that the conferences between President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill were "serving the interests of the Anglo-American forces" but did not "express the opinion of the entire Anglo-Soviet-American coalition."

The editorial again presented the Soviets' demand for another fighting front in Europe, saying "the time is ripe to inflict a decisive blow from the east and the west. The time is ripe to change over from words to actions."

No Invitation

Victory over Germany is still possible this year, it said.

Commenting on British and American press articles on the Roosevelt-Churchill conferences, the article said many newspapers forget that the conference is a British-American affair and discuss the participation and non-participation of the Soviet Union, although a Tass statement of Aug. 13 explained the Soviets were not invited.

Tass (official Russian news agency) said then:

'The Soviet government did not receive an invitation to be present at the meeting and, because of the nature of the conference, the participation of any one representative of the Soviet government at the meeting in Quebec was not and is not envisaged."

In the same vein, the magazine in another article said a Russian representative had been delayed for two months from entering into contact with the French committee of national liberation at Algiers because of "objections from Anglo-American authorities for supposedly military reasons."

"The French question awaits its solution," the magazine said.

JOHN L. LEWIS DUE FOR TEST

Government Starts To Return Coal Mines To Their Owners

Washington, Aug. 20. (AP)—Five coal mines were turned back to their owners today, amid indications that the government soon would relinquish control of others and thereby test the willingness of John L. Lewis' United Mine Workers to continue production.

None of these five mines had experienced strikes and none had a contract with the UMW. Thus their return did not involve the union's stated position that its members would continue to work until Oct. 31 if government operation continued, but would "automatically terminate" this agreement should the mines be returned to their owners.

The five were: Barnes Coal and Mining company, Coshocton, Ohio; Elk River Coal and Lumber company, Columbus, Ohio; Rail and Lake Coal company, Cleveland; Sheban Mining company, North Lima, Ohio, and the Shuff Coal company, Oneonta, Ala.

Ickes, as federal mines boss, has operated some 3,700 coal mines since May 1 in order to continue production free of strikes by the UMW. He explained that federal operation of the five mines now released "is not necessary to insure uninterrupted wartime coal production."

Montgomery Ward Petition Rejected In Order Of WLB

Washington, Aug. 20, (AP)—The war labor board (WLB), rejecting a contention by the Montgomery Ward and Company, Inc., that the Smith-Connally act is unconstitutional, tonight ordered union security, voluntary dues check-off and arbitration of grievances at the company's retail stores in New York, Detroit and Denver.

About 800 workers represented by the United Mail Order, Warehouse and Retail Employes Union (CIO) are affected by the decision.

In an opinion of the board, Wayne L. Morse, public member, asserted that a "take it or leave it" attitude on the part of employers in collective bargaining with union's "is fast becoming passe," and added the WLB considered the act constitutiona'

Washington rumors say a rift between Secretary of State Hull and his undersecretary Sumner Welles may result in Norman Armour replacing Welles. Armour, U. BRIBE INQUIRY TO BE PUSHED

Rushton Wants To Get Probe Over With Before Holidays

Lansing, Aug. 20. (AP)—Attorney General Herbert J. Rushton, preparing to petition next week for a grand jury investigation of the state legislature, asserted today he would attempt to avoid interference with next winter's special session of the lawmakers by driving for a wind-up of the probe "before the holidays."

Some state capitol sources have expressed fear that functioning of the legislature might be hampered or embarrassed if its members were being called continuously before the grand jury while the lawmakers were in session. Governor Kelly has indicated he would summon a special session about January 1.

Rushton conferred today with Circuit Judge Leland W. Carrof the Ingham county circuit court relative to the investigation and indicated it might be Monday before formal petition to the court for a grand jury would be ready.

If Judge Carr finds the petition is sufficient to warrant an inquiry, Rushton said, the taking of testimony will be started with a minimum of delay.

Two Nazi Generals Reported As Dead

London, Aug. 20 (AP)—The Berlin radio tonight reported the deaths of two Nazi generals, Col.-Gen. Hans Jesschonnek, 44-year-old chief of staff of the German airforce, and Maj.-Gen. Chamier-Glisezenski, whom it identified as "inventor of many German secret weapons."

Gen. Jesschonnek died at the headquarters of Reischmarshal Hermann Goering as a result of a "serious illness," said the broadcast, recorded by the Associated Press.

Gen. Chamier-Glisezenski was identified as head of the Peenemuende research laboratory, which was bombed heavily by the RAF on August 17.

The broadcast, recorded by the minister of information, gave no details of Chamier-Glisezenski's death but London newspapers printed dispatches from Stockholm saying the general was murdered during the RAF attack by a revolver bullet fired from the back.

Baby Boom Brings Orders For Buggies

Washington, Aug. 20 (AP)—The wartime boom in babies brought from the war production board (WPB) today an order for greatly increased output of carriages, walkers, strollers and sulkies.

Anticipating that this year's crop of new youngsters will be the biggest ever, WPB authorized manufacture of 693,700 baby vehicles of all kinds in the last three months of this year—a boost of approximately 50 percent over the current rate. Of the total 349,000 will be carriages.

Seamen On Lakes May Be Deferred From Army Draft

Washington, Aug. 20 (AP)—Draft Director Lewis B. Hershey, it was reported tonight, has asked that serious consideration be given to the deferment of skilled Great Lakes boatmen in view of the scarcity of them and the importance of moving vital iron ore.

The request, a follow-up to general orders to consider seriously the deferment of men in essential work when there is a shortage of replacements, was said to have been telegraphed to draft directors of states bordering the lakes.

Japs At Salamaua Are In Full Flight

Allied Headquarters in the Southwest Pacific, Saturday, Aug. 21 (AP)—Japanese jungle troops are in full flight from the mountain ridge defenses before Salamaua, New Guinea, and are falling back on the inner defenses of the air base, Gen. Douglas MacArthur announced today.

"The enemy is in full retreat to his inner citadel of defenses at Salamaua itself," a new communique reported.

Machine guns and artillery have been abandoned along with more than 350 buried dead.

"Our troops are mopping up."

The Japanese troops, their supplies low as the result of allied air attacks on coastal barges and their air support virtually wiped out on 'dromes above Salamaua, suddenly gave up positions from which they long have held off Americans and Australians.

Today's communique disclosed that their defenses cracked wide open. All at once, they gave up Orodubi, five miles southeast of Salamaua, the nearby strongpoint of Komiatum and the Goodview junction and Mount Tambu areas near the coast.

The day before General MacArthur's communique had announced the capture on the Francisco river of Bobdubi ridge, only three miles from the Salamaua airdrome whose possession would put the allies within easy fighter plane range of big Japanese holdings on New Britain.

Salamaua, which the Japanese have held since January, 1942, recently was laid in ruins by more than 1,000 tons of bombs.

Today's communique said that American and Australian troops, which for long have approached it, driving the enemy from ridge and jungle positions, had taken several key points in a drive on the last defenses.

Twenty-four Japanese planes were destroyed and nine damaged in a new raid 350 miles up the coast on Wewak. This brought to 248 the number of enemy planes smashed there within a week. The other 215 out of a fleet of 225 which might have supported the Salamaua garrison were wiped out in raids Tuesday and Wednesday. Friday 66 more tons of bombs were dropped there on air re-enforcements.

NAZI AIRFIELDS GET NO RESPITE

Allied Planes Keep Up Constant Shuttle Over Straits

London, Aug. 20 (AP)—A shuttle of allied planes over Dover Strait and the distant rumble of gunfire today signaled the sixth day of virtually non-stop allied aerial attacks concentrated on enemy airfields in western Europe.

An air ministry communique announced tonight that Mitchell medium bombers with Spitfire escort attacked enemy aircraft and a factory at Flushing in the Netherlands and that Boston mediums also escorted by Spitfires bombed railways and marshalling yards at Abbeville, France.

"One bomber is missing but the crew is safe," the communique added.

The attack on Flushing followed yesterday's Flying Fortress raid there.

Squadrons of planes renewed the assault today after RAF Mosquito bombers struck at Berlin last night and fighters pounced upon air fields and railway targets on the continent.

Fifteen German airdromes had been hit in 26 attacks from Sunday morning to Thursday evening.

Into this developing week of the air-front offensive, the allies have thrown virtually their full aerial armory in types of planes if not in maximum force.

Author Phelps, 78, Is Critically Ill

New Haven, Conn., Aug. 20, (AP)—William Lyon Phelps, 78, author, literary commentator and professor emeritus of English at Yale, was critically ill today at his home here. Physicians said he might not survive the week-end.

Prof. Phelps suffered a stroke several months ago.

During his years as writer and lecturer, Dr. Phelps won a nation-wide audience and was known as Yale's most popular member of the faculty.

He retired from active duty at the university in 1933 upon reaching the institution's age limit of 68.

Congoleum Blast Death Toll Seven

Kearny, N. J., Aug. 20, (AP)—The known death toll of last night's explosion at the Congoleum-Nairn, Inc., plant rose to seven today with the recovery from the rubble of four bodies, three still unidentified.

A company spokesman said at least six other persons were missing in the blast which levelled a three-story steel and concrete building into a mass of wreckage and rocked an area of 10 miles. Ten persons were injured, eight of them critically.

CANADA URGED TO SPEED PULP

Shortage Of Paper May Be Solved By New Manpower Plan

Quebec, Aug. 20 (AP)—A definite program experienced woodsmen of Canada believe would solve the shortage of pulpwood cutters and thus eliminate the shortage of paper will be described to Dominion officials in Ottawa by the U. S. House subcommittee which is investigating newsprint supplies.

The suggestions are a composite of information obtained on a visit to the Saguenay River district, one of the largest newsprint producing areas in this leading paper province.

Rep. Wolverton, (R., N.J.) said today the committee would point out to Canadian Selective Service Chief Arthur MacNamara the essential services rendered by newspapers.

"In touching the essentiality of newspapers we should emphasize how important the newspaper is to the U. S. in our own war effort." Wolverton declared.

"I am fearful that Canadian authorities don't realize how important newspapers are to winning the war."

The committee, headed by Lyle Boren, (D-Okla) is seeking ways of increasing Canadian output, which has shrunk to the point that shipments this year have been about 65 per cent of normal, and further curtailment has been discussed.

Goering Ashamed Of His Air Force

London, Aug. 20 (AP)— A personal order from Reichsmarshal Hermann Goering saying he was ashamed of his German air force for no longer "loving battle" was found in Sicily, a Reuter report from Allied headquarters in North Africa said tonight.

In the order dated sometime in July, Goering complained of the loss of the German air force's "aggressive spirit."

NEW RUSSIAN ARMY DRIVES INTO UKRAINE

ALL BUT 13 MILES OF KHARKOV AREA NOW ENCIRCLED

BY JUDSON O'QUINN

London, Saturday, Aug. 21 (AP)—Russia's new steppe army smashed deep into the Ukraine almost 100 miles northeast of Kharkov to capture Lebedin, highwater mark of last winter's offensive, Moscow announced early today, while London reports indicated the Red army had encircled all but 13 miles of Kharkov itself.

Lebedin is 100 miles from the starting point of the Soviet Ukrainian offensive near Belgorod and mid-way between captured Akhtyrka and threatened Sumy. The Russian column that took it apparently was aiming for the vital rail junction of Konotop on the Kiev-Bryansk railway, 70 miles to the northwest.

Finnish Front Active

(The BBC quoted a Berlin broadcast as saying the Russians "are now attacking furiously at six widely separated points along a 1,000-mile front" between Leningrad and Murmansk in the far north. NBC heard the BBC broadcast, which, if true, means the Russians are opening a new offensive on the long-stalemated Finnish front.)

A Moscow communique recorded by the Soviet Monitor said a total of 6,100 Germans were killed yesterday on all fronts, including 1,400 in the Kharkov zone, 2,600 on the central front southwest of Spas Demensk, and 1,300 on the Bryansk front.

On the Bryansk front the Soviets acknowledged fierce German opposition as they pounded on from captured Karachev, 25 miles to the east. Farther north, in the Spas Demensk offensive, the Russians were moving between the two railroads leading to Smolensk roughly 75 miles northwestward.

In the Ukraine offensive over 20 towns and villages fell to driving columns northwest of Kharkov, said the communique. The Germans countered with fresh infantry and tanks in an effort to stem the Red army advance.

Supplies Captured

Opposing tanks crashed over the countryside in a weaving battle of armor but the Germans receded after 45 of their tanks were disabled by Soviet fire. Victorious Russians captured fuel and ammunition supplies as the German fled, the bulletin added.

A number of fortified places were reported captured by the Russians southeast of Kharkov. It was in this general area that the last German escape corridor narrowed to a single railway. The Germans were making every suburban crossroads a resistance center in their effort to delay the complete encirclement of the city.

Soviet planes were soaring over the ground troops, crushing enemy pillboxes and strong points in the fourth battle for Kharkov. Russian troops on the east and southeast last were reported only a few miles outside the city, and for a week shock troops have been battering reinforced Germans in the northeastern suburbs.

Strongpoints southwest of Spas Demensk fell to the Russians after

WAGES RAISED FOR WOODSMEN

Logging And Sawmill Workers Eligible For Adjustments

Washington, Aug. 20. (AP)—Wage stabilization directors for the sixth and eleventh regional war labor boards received authority today to extend wage adjustments to additional logging and sawmill workers.

The new authorization, handed down by the war labor board here, applies to the regional boards handling wage questions in Michigan, Wisconsin and northeastern Minnesota.

A minimum rate of 57½ cents an hour for logging operations and 69½ cents for sawmill operators—in the case of 30 Michigan and northern Wisconsin lumber companies—was established by the WLB last June 10. As a result most of the workers received an increase of approximately 12½ cents.

Adjustments for other such workers in the same area in conformity with the rates set in the previous case were called for in today's authorization. The WLB order specifically prevented increases predicated upon price relief applications by the companies.

Danes Consider Open Rebellion Against Hitler

BY JOHN H. COLBURN

Stockholm, Aug. 20. (AP)—Danish political leaders met in Copenhagen today to consider whether the government would back an open rebellion of the people against the Nazi occupation and war services, or yield part of its justice administration to the Germans.

The government of Premier Eric Scavenius appeared to seek a showdown between the rising public clamor for a new government with a more militant attitude toward Germans and the Berlin demands for a more submissive Denmark.

Attacks on Nazi soldiers and sabotage against factories producing German war materials have been reported rampant for a week.

Details of the swelling campaign against Nazi rule were being brought here by travelers arriving from Denmark today.

The meeting of the political leaders, which included all members of the Danish parliament, was the first since a year ago when they put Scavenius at the head of the government. Each of the five parties has held separate sessions to discuss the crisis. There was no official indication what the outcome of the conference might be.

No More Concessions

With every indication that no further concessions will be made to the Germans, however, there was the possibility that Nazi Minister Werner Best would invoke some type of military authority

LIEUT. BARRON DIES IN CRASH

Airplane Accident Occurs Near Hampstead, New Hampshire

Lieut. Robert William Barron, 21, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Barron of Flat Rock, was killed in an airplane crash near Hampstead, N. H., on Thursday, according to a telegram received yesterday by the parents from Col. R. C. Wriston, commandant of Grenier Field, N. H. Details of the accident were not given in the message.

Lieut. Barron

Lieut. Barron was born in Flat Rock Jan. 4, 1922. He attended the Escanaba township schools and the Escanaba high school graduating from the latter in 1940. He joined the Army Air Force Feb. 1, 1942. Lieut. Barron completed his pre-flight training at March Field, Calif., and received his pilot training with army flying units at Cal Aero, Calif. He was awarded his silver wings and a second lieutenant's commission at Luke Field, Ariz., June 22, 1943. Later, he was assigned for additional training at the University of Vermont, Middlebury, Vt.

Besides his parents, he is survived by four brothers and one sister: Allen and Daniel, in the United States Navy; Francis Reid, Fort Benning, Ga.; John, at Marquette; and Mary Anne, at home in Flat Rock.

FIVE BELIEVED ABOARD

Hamstead, N. H., Aug. 20, (AP)—Army authorities today were investigating the crash of an army cargo plane which plunged to earth and burned near Angle Pond yesterday with the loss of at least four lives.

The Eastern defense command at New York announced that the four bodies had been recovered from the wreckage and added a fifth man was believed aboard the plane.

Identity of the dead was withheld pending notification of relatives.

Steamer Disabled On Buffalo Trip

Cleveland, Aug. 20, (AP)—Two tugs were towing the passenger steamer Eastern States to Cleveland tonight after engine trouble disabled the boat about 45 miles northwest of Clevelahd harbor.

The Great Lakes Towing Co. said the tugs California and Louisiana would arrive with the lake steamer about midnight.

The Eastern States, operated by the Detroit and Cleveland Navigation Co., was bound from Detroit to Buffalo with approximately 500 passengers and crew.

ITALIAN RAIL CENTER MADE BURNING RUINS

ASSAULT ON FOGGIA WORSE THAN RAID ON ROME

BY RELMAN MORIN

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, Aug. 20, (AP)—Allied air fleets slashing at Italy's railroad sinews of defense blasted the communications center of Foggia in saturation block-buster raids yesterday, while at sea American naval forces seized the Aeolian stepping-stone islands north of Sicily.

The raid on Foggia, 20 miles inland from the east coast opposite Naples, was described officially as the heaviest of the Mediterranean war, and although the total number of planes participating was not specified, it was greater even than the total hurled against Rome in the first attack on the Italian capital.

Bombers By Hundreds

Seven hundred planes — 500 bombers and 200 fighters—were used by the allies in the Rome raid.

The city is one of the master bastions in any axis blueprint for the defense of southern Italy.

The important industrial and communications center was left a seething mass of flame by three different types of bombers that attacked by daylight and darkness on a scale unparalleled in both size and ferocity in the Mediterranean war.

Flying Fortresses in double waves, followed by formations of Liberators, struck the first blows. Their strings of bombs interlaced the freight yards, squarely hit a railway bridge and knocked out repair shops, warehouses, military barracks and set fire to a large number of freight and passenger cars.

Buildings Toppled

Sheets of flame shot upward from locomotive repair shops and the railway station itself, and explosion-hurled bits of wreckage and rubble filled the air as the last of the big bombers swept past.

But even then the "triple strength" raid wasn't ended.

As darkness fell, RAF Wellingtons, guided by fires visible 80 miles away, loosed a cascade of 2,000-pound bombs that spread the old fires and started new ones, and toppled the walls of buildings already undermined by the day assaults.

Italian and German fighters appeared in strength for the first time in several weeks to meet the first wave of raiders, but 38 of the attackers were shot down before the combined fire power of the Fortresses flying their tight formations.

It was a shattering blow against the axis defense of southern Italy. The city is one of Italy's four largest rail junctions and if the Germans plan to reinforce the Italian toe they must maintain Foggia's rail connections.

Seven Islands Taken

The appearance of a large number of fighters sharply emphasized the importance axis commanders place on this strategic point across the peninsula from Naples.

316 BOATS NOW IN LAKE FLEET

312 Are Carrying Iron Ore; Only Four Are Handling Grain

The fleet of American Great Lakes ore vessels pushed its all-time record trip capacity, based on 20-foot draft, in July 15-Aug. 15 month to 2,925,090 gross tons through addition of three Maritime Commission-built ships, reports C. C. Lindeman, statistician for the M. A. Hanna Co.

Number of ships in the fleet rose to 316 and only four of these were carrying grain on Aug. 15, a betterment of four during the month. The 312 engaged in moving ore compared with 302 a year ago, the gain representing the nine new government-built ships and one other.

Ships placed in commission the past month were the George A. Sloan, Clarence A. Randall and John T. Hutchinson. The new J. Burton Ayers will join the fleet shortly. Lindeman's detailed report follows:

Many Oil Users Delay in Filing For New Rations

Iron Mountain, Mich.— In effect threatening their own comfort in the coming winter, about 50 per cent of this region's fuel oil users have thus far failed to renew their home-heating fuel oil rations, Lawrence R. Jarvey, district Office of Price Administration rationing officer disclosed today.

"The warm weather has given these consumers a false sense of security for the future," he said. "There are several important factors which they overlook."

For one thing, he said, fueu oil dealers have limited fuel storage capacity and every time they fill a consumer's tank now, they have that much more room for storing for a refill at a time when transportation facilities might interfere with replenishing their supplies.

"The tanks of householders represent a significant storage volume which should be used now so that suppliers can store to their greatest capacity," he said. "It may well be in some sections of this region that the storage capacity of individual users, if filled now, migh spell the difference between an adequate winter supply and an inadequate one."

Another factor in present concern over the delinquent consumers lies in the desire to avoid the difficulties experienced last autumn when it was impossible for the OPA to issue rations well enough in advance of the cold season, and dealers and suppliers found themselves caught in an avalanche of last-minute and emergency orders.

Ration boards have mailed fuel oil renewal applications to all consumers who applied last year. The ration coupons have in turn been remitted to users by the boards after receiving the applications.

Gen. Bradley Praised By Associates In Army

BY ERNIE PYLE

Somewhere in Sicily—(by wireless)—As all of you who have followed this column know, we have kept our pen pointed mainly at the common soldier — the well-known G. I. — for lo, these many months, and let the exalted high command shift for itself. But now for the next few days we are going to reverse things and write about an American general.

Pyle

This is because he is pretty important but not not very well known to the public, and because I thought you might feel a little better if you knew what kind of man was in direct charge of your boys who have been doing the fighting in Sicily.

The man I speak of is Lieut. Gen. Omar Nelson Bradley, who is the head of a corps of the United States Army.

General Bradley is what you might call third in the American command over here. General Eisenhower is at the top of everything. Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton Jr. is the head man for our forces in Sicily. And Lieutenant General Bradley commands the corps which has been making the main effort.

General Bradley has been written about very little, and would continue to be written about very little if he had his way. He is innately modest and humble, and on top of that he knows that too much publicity can sometimes wreck a man's career. But he also realizes that when a soldier is in such a position as his he more or less becomes public property. So he has consented graciously to my doing this series about him.

I make no bones about the fact that I am a tremendous admirer of General Bradley. I don't believe I have ever known a person to be so unanimously loved and respected by the men around and under him. In writing of him it would be easy to slip into embarrassing overpraise, so I will deliberately try to avoid that.

Promoted in Tunisia

General Bradley came to Africa in mid-February and joined the front-line troops at Gafsa, in central Tunisia, during the bitter fighting at El Guettar. He was deputy corps commander then, under General Patton.

After El Guettar General Patton was called back to work on the preparations for the Sicilian invasion, and General Bradley was put in command of a corps for the final great phase of our fight in northern Tunisia.

He handled that campaign so well that after it was over he was promoted to lieutenant general, given a Distinguished Service Medal, and decorated twice by the French. He has continued to command a corps through the Sicilian campaign, and again he has handled it with distinction. Nobody knows what lies ahead for him, but we who have seen him work cannot believe that his path leads anywhere but upward.

When General Bradley first showed up at Gafsa he hardly said a word for two weeks. He just worked around absorbing everything and getting acquainted, telling everybody to keep on doing his job just as he had been doing. In fact, he hasn't said very much right up to this moment. Yet after a few weeks his influence began to be felt, and gradually, before anyone was hardly aware of it, he had this corps in the palm of his hand, and every man in it would now go to hell and back again for him.

Liked by Associates

One day a colonel stopped me under a tree and said this about the General:

"He has the greatness of simplicity and the simplicity of greatness."

A second-lieutenant friend of mine who has served with the Canadians and been twice decorated for bravery told me this:

"He is the finest officer, without exception, that I have ever served under."

One night I was sitting with a bunch of enlisted men in the dusk and one of them said:

"Are the correspondents awake to General Bradley? Do they know what a fine man he is?"

And now and then you'll hear a correspondent remark something like this:

"Say, that Bradley is my man. I think he's an old fox."

They always say it as though they were startled and quite pleased by their own sagacity at suddenly having discovered it.

But General Bradley isn't an old fox at all. He is too direct to be a fox. If he has two outstanding traits they are simplicity and honesty. There is no pretense about him, either in method or in personality. He is just what he is, and that happens to be a plain Middle-Westerner with common sense and common honesty who has studied and practiced all his adult life for the job he is doing now. And he is doing it in just the same calm way he would play a game of bridge or drive a car to the station.

More about General Bradley tomorrow.

BUSES FAVOR HIGHER SPEED

45 MPH Limit Desirable To Meet Nation's Needs, Claim

Despite war-time restrictions, buses are now carrying more than half of all inter-city passengers and could assume an even greater burden of essential travel if road speed limitations were eased, according to the National Association of Motor Bus Operators.

Many of the restrictions which hampered the bus operators in meeting war-time transportation demands have been partially overcome, the association points out, but the industry could make a greater contribution if the highway speed limit for the intercity carriers were raised. The association's report shows the the reduction in maximum speed to 35 miles per hour has failed to produce appreciable savings in either rubber or motor fuel so far as the intercity bus industry is concerned. On the other hand, the slower speeds have interfered with the efficiency of bus operation by lengthening schedules 30 per cent, reducing carrying capacity, requiring more manpower in driver and mechanic personnel, and causing undue wear upon engines, transmissions, and clutches.

Gigantic Demands

Leaders of the industry contend that if intercity buses were allowed to operate at a maximum of 45 miles per hour on the open highway, a substantially increased number of passenger could be carried without additional equipment or personnel.

The extent of the industry's contribution to war-time transportation needs is reported in a survey of current operating conditions that was made for the association by impartial investigators. The findings have been presented to government agencies and fact-finding organizations to acquaint them with the vital part the bus industry is playing in the war effort and to indicate how the easing of certain restrictions would enable the highway passenger carriers to assume even greater travel burdens.

"The demand for public transportation has grown to gigantic proportions," said Arthur M. Hill, president of the bus operators organization. "This is because of the tremendous number of men and women in the armed forces and the unprecedented employment in war industries, coupled with the fact that gas and tire rationing has so drastically curtailed the use of privately-owned automobiles. In 1942, the intercity buses carried 692,000,000 passengers and this all-time record will be greatly surpassed this year."

SEES PULPWOOD FOR MANY YEARS

Hoffmaster Says Science And Fire Prevention Assure Supply

While the pulp and paper industry is now chiefly affected by a manpower shortage problem, there will always be enough pulpwood in the Upper Peninsula to sustain the mills of this district, P. J. Hoffmaster, director of conservation, predicted while in Escanaba yesterday to confer with Dan Raess, district supervisor.

Fires have been kept out of the woods in recent years and consequently a large number of pulpwood trees are growing in the Upper Peninsula, the conservation director pointed out. Spruce, balsam and the other pulpwoods grow into merchantable size in a relatively brief span of years, and technological developments are bringing a greater use of jackpine, popples and other inferior species, not used by the paper industry previously.

Even the maples are coming back in some areas, said Mr. Hoffmaster, who told of a second growth stand, covering about 25,000 acres near Blaney, that is now nearing maturity.

Mr. Hoffmaster came here from Ontonagon, where members of the state conservation commission conferred with state legislators and Upper Peninsula leaders regarding a plan to save a portion of the Porcupine Mountain timber from being logged off. The tentative plan, he reported, is to ask the state legislature for an appropriation to acquire about 20,000 acres to be set aside as a national monument.

The conservation head left Escanaba late yesterday to visit the J. W. Wells state park at Cedar River and the Gourley sustained yield lumbering project, before returning to Lansing.

STOLL INJURED IN AUTO CRASH

Escanaba Marine Escapes Death When Car Turns Over And Burns

Cpl. Charles Stewart Stoll, son of C. W. Stoll, Escanaba, escaped serious injury early Friday morning when an automobile, which he was driving, failed to negotiate a curve near Pembine, Wisconsin. Cpl. Stoll, a veteran of the Guadalcanal campaign, is on a 30 day furlough from the U. S. Marines.

The accident occurred some time before 6:30 o'clock Friday morning. A milk truck driver noticed the burned wreckage of the automobile on County Highway "Z," better known as the Four Seasons Highway, in northern Marinette county. The highway connects the Four Seasons club at Pembine, where Stoll visited Thursday night, with highway US-141.

The milk truck driver found Stoll in a crumpled position about 12 feet from the burned automobile, which was 135 feet off the road. Believing that Stoll was dead, the driver went into Pembine and notified Officer J. P. Shaffer of the county highway police of the accident. Shaffer arrived at the scene of the mishap, he found that Stoll was still alive, but unconscious.

Shaffer took Stoll to the receiving hospital at Iron Mountain, arriving there at eight o'clock. The officer reported that the burned car, owned by Stoll's father, was cold when he reached the scene, indicating that the mishap had occurred some hours earlier.

Stoll was at the Four Seasons club in Pembine Thursday night and called his father at Escanaba from there at 7:30 p. m. Mr. Stoll went to Iron Mountain yesterday after being notified of the accident.

Dr. Edward McCormick, Niagara, attending physician, announced last night that although Stoll was severely shaken up an eramination revealed that his only injuries consisted of a scratch on the head and a partial black eye, and so far as could be determined there were no serious complications.

Cpl. Stoll was slightly wounded in the Guadalcanal campaign, being hit in the left leg by shrapnel. He also was a victim of malaria. After being evacuated from Guadalcanal at which he was a member of the original landing party, Cpl. Stoll was removed to a South Pacific rest base, later being removed to a naval hospital in the United States.

Following his 30 day furlough, Stoll was slated to enter the U. S. Marines Officer Candidate School at San Diego, Calif.

Old Age Benefits No Bar To Taking Part Time Work

Munising, Aug. 20 — Recent changes in the old age assistance rulings permit assistance to recipients who received money in July to secure employment on farms without having their incomes deducted from the assistance grant, it was announced here yesterday by Miss Margaret Lipsett, supervisor of the Alger county bureau of social aid.

The original ruling permitted those who received assistance in April to procure agricultural employment. In answer to numerous inquiries Miss Lipsett states that old age recipients may accept occasional employment for a few days at a time when such work is available and no deduction will be made from their grant.

The total amount received in July for the three types of public assistance in Alger county was $8,971.50, paid to 302 persons. Of this amount $6,982.60 was paid to 264 recipients of old age assistance, the average being $26.45 to each recipient. This marks a considerable increase over July, 1942, when 250 persons received $4,431.40, an average of $17.65. Last month 36 recipients of aid to dependent children were paid $1,806 for children, an average of $50.19 to each family, while in the same month in 1942, 47 families were paid $1,674.80, averaging $35.63 a family. In July this year six persons received $182.90 for aid to the blind or an average of $30.48, while in July, 1942, six persons received $131.50, an average of $21.91.

The reason for the increase in average grants is that food, clothing and fuel allowances have been increased considerably during the past year.

Rushton To Act

APPARENTLY Atty. General Herbert J. Rushton is convinced that where there's a lot of smoke, there must be some fire.

Ever since the close of the last session of the legislature there have been ugly rumors floating about the state that bribes were both given and taken, to influence the passage or rejection of certain legislation, during not only the current session but in previous sessions.

The attorney general has announced that he will immediately file a petition, calling for a grand jury investigation of these charges.

Earlier in the week, when rumors of bribe charges were first made public, Mr. Rushton announced that he would conduct a preliminary investigation, to determine the probable truth or falsity of the charges. By his announcement on Thursday, that he has decided to file a petition for the calling of a grand jury, that official must have become convinced that there exists at least some basis of fact back of the charges.

The attorney general was probably influenced, principally, in this decision by the revelation, made public this week by Representative William C. Stenson, of Greenland, Ontonagon county. Rep. Stenson says he found $1,000 in currency in the pocket of his top coat, with a note asking him to vote against the anti-chain banking bill, then before the legislature. He promptly returned the money to the man he suspected of offering the bribe. The Ontonagon legislator is prepared to make affidavit to this fact and will so testify before any grand jury that may be called. This is the first concrete evidence of wrong-doing on the part of legislators and lobbyists to be offered in substantiation of rumors that have been afloat at the state capital during the past several legislative sessions.

With these facts before him there is but one course for the attorney general to pursue. For the protection of honest legislators and honest lobbyists these charges must be sifted to the very bottom — let the chips fall where they may.

Big News In Making

SOME surprising developments evidently are in the offing in the South Pacific war zone, judging from the optimistic statements made this week by President Quezon of the Philippines, President Roosevelt and General MacArthur.

The conquered Filipino people were assured by their leaders that the day of their liberation is not far off. While our forces in the South Pacific still seem to be a long way from the Philippines, the tempo of fighting has been stepped up in recent weeks, and it is quite probable our progress will be at a much more rapid pace than during the first year after Pearl Harbor.

Troops, planes and other war materials have been moving to the South Pacific in large quantities in recent months. We are now on the offensive, and likely will remain so until victory is won. From this distant point, however, it looks like a long drawn-out war against the Japanese, but probably MacArthur has accumulated more strength in the air, land and sea than we have been led to believe.

Cooperation Counts

STEPS taken by the city officials of Gladstone to assure the reopening of the canning plant in that community promise to have far-reaching and beneficial results.

Housewives are eagerly grasping the opportunity to have tomatoes and other vegetables canned at the attractive price of six cents per can. Orders for the canned vegetables are coming from all over the Upper Peninsula, and it now appears the cannery will run much longer than was originally anticipated.

The cooperative canning enterprise has the makings of a permanent industry. It demonstrates what a community can do when it displays both cooperation and determination to do the job that has to be done.

V-Mail Campaign

THE government is currently engaged in what should be the easiest selling campaign in the world. It is trying to persuade all correspondents of fighting men overseas to send their letters by V-mail.

Most of us probably know already the great saving of shipping space that V-mail achieves—space that is being filled by food and medicine and guns and munitions. But those who have not used V-mail may not realize the many advantages it offers.

In the first place, it gives the greatest assurance of delivery. Original letters are kept at the port of embarkation. If a ship or plane carrying the microfilm copies of these letters is destroyed, a duplicate film is made and forwarded immediately.

V.-mail also saves the user time, for it has priority over all mail except official dispatches. And it costs no more than ordinary postage.

Many people are using V-mail already; the 100 millionth letter was handled some weeks ago. But the government would like more business. This is the reason: If all overseas mail were sent in V-mail form, it would have the effect of freeing 25 Liberty ships for fulltime service in carrying vital cargo.

Saving the Porcupines

ANOTHER effort will be made to obtain either state or federal acquisition of 20,000 acres of timber land in the scenic Porcupine mountains region in the western part of the Upper Peninsula.

The virgin timber area, in all, covers upwards of 200,000 acres, and at one time conservationists in that region had hopes of getting all of it under public ownership as a part of the Ottawa national forest. With this accomplished, a sustained yield cutting program then could have been instituted with a view toward giving permanency to the remaining wood industries. Efforts to induce the federal government to purchase the huge timber stand failed to materialize, however.

Now, it is hoped that at least a 20,000-acre tract, comprising some frontage on Lake Superior, the Lake of the Clouds and Mirror Lake in the Porcupines region, might be acquired and set aside as a national monument for "recreational, educational and aesthetic purposes."

With this objective in mind, it is planned to introduce a bill in the coming session of the legislature to obtain an appropriation for the purchase of the site, which would be reserved as a monument to the Great Lakes lumbering industry. The area, which contains outstanding scenery, hunting, fishing and other recreational advantages, would have much commercial value in the postwar development of the tourist business in that section of the Upper Peninsula.

Stirulated by wartime demand for forest products, lumbering is proceeding in that area at a rapid pace. Within a few years scarcely anything will be left of the fine timber stand, unless some action is taken to save a portion of it.

VIOLENCE WON'T HELP THE NEGRO
(Milwaukee Journal)

The committee appointed by Gov. Kelly of Michigan to study and report on the recent Detroit race rioting has announced its findings.

If one can summarize the situation in the light of the report, he must conclude two things:

1. The principal guilt for the outbreak of this riot—where and when it broke out—must rest upon militant and belligerent Negroes who spread false rumors and welcomed a fight.

2. The principal guilt for the condition of race tension that made the rise of bitter and belligerent Negroes possible must rest upon white people.

In other words, the immediate fault was chiefly Negro, the background fault was chiefly white.

The lesson impressed by the riot is not new, but it is clear: Justice for the Negro in this country can never be exacted by violence. For first, violence will only deepen the race prejudice; second, the Negroes —being only one-tenth of the population —and bound to suffer most and be defeated in any violent struggle.

The report of Gov. Kelly's committee shows that a considerable group of Negroes had been fanned into a militant mood by some Negro newspapers and some Negro leaders who, in recent years, have constantly appealed to the Negroes to demand justice by violence.

This militant attitude has been built up among many young Negroes by both Communist and non-Communist leaders and even, to quote from the report, by "some self-designated responsible Negro leaders."

These individuals must bear great blame for the belligerent state of mind of a portion of the Negro youth. They should now see the sad results of this sort of appeal. No rights have been won. No problem has been solved. Negroes and whites have killed each other and suspicion and hate have deepened, not lessened, where riots have occurred.

Violence will only endanger all the gains our Negroes have made since the Civil war!

Fair Enough

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER

Pegler

New York—President Roosevelt, in his recent report on the war, gave certain assurances to the men and women of the armed forces and the men of the Merchant Marine as to the preferences and benefits which they will receive when they come home. This was just a white chip to open the pot, so to speak, and as the boys begin to raise around the table, the betting will get brisker and rougher. By this time next year, the candidates will be tossing IOU's into the middle, couched in figures like the score by innings, all drawn against the future, including the future of the very people who are on the receiving end of the promises.

—"WHAT ABOUT ME?"—

This is all pretty thin, however, because everybody knows that when this is over and the lads and ladies come home, they will not be in a mood to ask or receive. They will just take over and take it because this time there are so many of them that no candidate or party will be able to stand them off. A discharge bounty of bonus of $1000 for all hands will be easy promising because, after all, that would run to only 10 billion dollars, which used to be reckoned as a fairly sizable pile but isn't much now by comparison with the bill for the war and the war on want which preceded it. If we are going to send groceries and food and machinery to the hundreds of millions of ex-enemies and ex-subjects of the ex-enemies (as we probably aren't on any such scale as we are now leading these people to expect) 10 billions or even 50 billions more added on to the bill, to provide a bounty or bonus of $5000 each, will not intimidate people who will then be asking "what about me?"

But the really honest candidate, if we have one next year, will be the man who speaks up to the veterans in somewhat the same mood and vein in which Winston Churchill laid it down to the people of Britain when he took over and the Nazi across the channel was drowning from the effects of his big meal on the continent instead of plunging into the water in pursuit of the British. The honest candidate would say that from war the veterans must expect to turn to hard, steady work and a standard of living considerably below our old one, because when it is over this country will be just about as clean stripped of things that people need as the leanest store in town today. He would say that, yes, a fellow would rate a little layoff and some parades and ceremonies but that the recovery and rebuilding will call for hard work, starting almost immediately and continuing without prospect of any let-up for years and years. And he would promise them years of extremely heavy taxes, too, and point out that because there will be so very many veterans this time the rest of the people, most of whom will be either definitely old or within a few birthdays of the downhill slope, will be unable to tote the load and won't be here to tote it more than a few years, anyway.

—LOTS OF PROMISES LIKELY—

That would be a hell of a way for a candidate to speak to a block of votes which will run this country after the war, so probably no candidate will take this line and the promising about the brave new world of the future will be unconfined. And I have no confidence that the veterans will want to reclaim entirely the old freedoms at home, which many of them (the younger ones) never knew anyway except by hearsay, and break ranks and have done with regimentation in their civilian life. True, they will not be very patient about questionnaires and forms but if it is put to them that by filling out the blanks and giving certain information and complying with certain restrictive regulations saved over from the war, they stand to get benefits in money or tax-exemption or preferential status in government jobs, they will be strongly tempted to go along and to root for more and more government jobs. A man may think he is tired of regimentation when he is only tired of discipline and routine but unconsciously dependent on the government as a result of years in the service. That life does develop a feeling that "they," meaning the government, will be sending along the food and clothing in time if not on time, and there will be many persuasive talkers to promise "security" without mentioning that the price of "security" provided by the state is obedience to the state in phases of civilian life in which Americans always before were free.

To be sure the veterans will want work because work is the human way of life and the idleness was a curse equal to the poverty in the long depression. But what chance has a candidate who says, "I promise you only work and taxes to pay for the shells you shot away" against one who promises cash awards, tax exemption and security?

By The Bugler

SOME INTERESTING sidelights and angles have developed in connection with the New Industries drive of the Escanaba Chamber of Commerce. It is somewhat unfortunate that this industrial program is being carried on at a time when the public mind is so intensely concentrated upon the battlefield news from a world at war. At any other time, the New Industries drive and the various factors relating to it would be red hot local news, and would command the intense local public attention it deserves.

Like all public and community movements, the present drive for new industries, with new jobs and payrolls, is replete with high spots and, unfortunately, some low ebbs. Fortunately, the high spots are many and significant, while the low ebbs have been relatively unimportant and sometimes humorous if one has a low-comedy turn of mind.

ESCANABA OLDSTERS agree, almost to a man, that the entire project is perhaps the most encouraging step forward taken by our city in many a year. In the initial stages of the campaign, the statement, "I have been waiting thirty years for this," was heard several times, uttered by public spirited citizens who have an intimate knowledge of Escanaba's economic history and prospects. Oddly enough, the idea behind the program is as old as the community itself. The "something new has been added" in this instance has been merely the contribution of work, energy, and personal sacrifice by a group of local business and labor leaders. These men had reached the obvious conclusion that a city's future is only dreamed away when everyone waits for everyone else to do the job that must be done. Once work and energy, combined with leadership, were applied to Escanaba's long-standing, wispy dreams of industrial expansion, results materialized and real progress ensued. After all these years, the old idea began to have some value.

HERE AT HOME, some disappointments have been experienced. A considerable number of Escanaba's community leaders, young and old, were called upon to solicit the funds necessary to this vital program. Some of these leaders wisely nodded their heads in agreement with the entire program; gravely packed up their solicitation cards and materials; promised a real, active campaign; and then went home and forgot all about it. Others were called upon, and consented, to shoulder their responsibilities.

Generally, the response from local businessmen and property owners to the call for money has been inspiring. The solicitation of funds is still continuing. The Industrial Committee set up a sub-committee to assess quotas for all of the businessmen in the community. The quotas have been set at the sacrifice, "hard-to-pay" level. The more an individual can pay, the more he is asked to contribute. The early success of the drive for funds should make the entire city proud of its businessmen. Many contributors have had to borrow the funds to pay their subscriptions. Many others subscribed amounts far in excess of what they individually could possibly realize from the program, however successful it might eventually be.

SEVERAL of the elder businessmen of the community, whose most productive years are behind them, have contributed large amounts, basing their contributions solely, as they put it, upon their debt to the people of the community from whom they have made their living.

As could only be expected, some local businessmen and property owners, as well as some local business establishments owned by outside interests, have decided to take a free ride. Incidently, the New Industries program will supply the city of Escanaba with a new 1943 business directory. This directory, eventually, will classify practically every Escanaba business institution in regard to its cooperative attitude, its belief in the City of Escanaba, and its civic mindedness.

None of the low ebbs connected with the program, thus far, have come in connection with the sale of the city of Escanaba to concerns who are considering a change of location. The entire dealings of the Chamber of Commerce Industrial Committee with outside interests have proved and proved again how bright Escanaba's prospects can be.

IT SHOULD BE a source of great encouragement to every citizen of this city to observe that a considerable number of well-established, time-tested industries are anxious to move their plants to Escanaba. Instead of a city with an eternally dwindling industrial future, Escanaba suddenly has emerged as a city which has a lot to sell to the American industries which are seeking new localities. It must be noted that the new industries which come to our city are not wild-cat, shoestring concerns struggling along with new dreams and new ideas. Instead, they are old concerns, well developed, whose products, finances, and labor relations have stood the tests of time and business experience.

Underlying the high spots and the low ebbs of the activities of the Industrial Committee, thus far, can be seen a serious challenge to the people of Escanaba. All of the low ebbs and disappointments have come from the people of the community itself. The dealings, as has been said before, with outside interests have led only to encouragement and bright prospects. The success or failure of this program may well mean the success or failure of Escanaba as a city where willing people may work and honest businessmen may earn a living. The success or failure of the program will depend upon the desires and the efforts of all the people of the community. Opportunity is here. A bright future is here. Despair and poverty also, can be here. It is up to the contributors, the solicitors, and the people of this city. There is no doubt that "put-up" time or "shut-up" time is at hand.

25 Years Ago—1918

President Wilson visited Secretary of Navy Daniels and Secretary of War Baker at their offices in the war and navy buildings. The purpose of the after six o'clock calls it was believed was to more thoroughly discuss the Russian situation.

Working committees of the Trades and Labor Council were busily engaged in lining up their plans for what they hoped to make one of the greatest Labor Day celebrations in the city's history.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

BY DREW PEARSON

Washington — The Spanish and Nazi radio blared forth a message last weekend, which, if true, sounds very suspicious for supposedly neutral Spain. On the basis of the Axis - Spanish announcement, it would appear that Germany had established a secret bomber base in the Spanish Balearic Islands or somewhere in Spain.

Pearson

What the German radio claimed was that a squadron of Nazi torpedo planes (on Friday, Aug. 13) sank 70,000 tons of Allied shipping including two destroyers and four large merchant ships, just East of Gibraltar, as a big convoy was entering the Mediterranean.

The interesting thing about the Nazi communique was that the raid was reported made by torpedo planes. It happens that torpedo planes have a very limited radius between 300 and 400 miles. Because of the tremendous weight of the torpedo they cannot fly far; cannot spare much time hovering around in the air looking for their target. In fact some of the torpedo planes which went out to get the Bismarck were purely sacrifice planes never expected to come back.

Compared to this 300-400 mile radius, it is a full 800 miles from Gibraltar to the nearest base in France.

Big mystery, therefore, is where the Nazi torpedo planes came from. Was it the nearby Balearic Isles, or a hidden point on the coast of Spain? This is the first case in a long long time that Axis torpedo planes have been able to penetrate anywhere near Gibraltar.

The Spanish radio gave further corroborating details, told how the Allied convoy was composed of 70 ships bound for Africa and how German pilots had been picked up by Spanish ships, while a German plane made an emergency landing at Aguilas.

But there was nothing to explain how German torpedo planes were able to make this record-breaking flight. So, either the Nazis have developed a new long-range torpedo plane or else Franco has given the Nazis a secret base in Spain.

Note: Secretary Hull recently told newsmen that he was entirely satisfied with his foreign policy, considered Franco with the United States.

—YES, WE HAVE NO BANANAS—

Who gets Mexico's bananas? While President Roosevelt is in Quebec, he might say a word to Prime Minister Mackenzie King about the question, for Canada is now getting most of the bananas that would normally come to the United States from Mexico and Guatemala.

This is because U. S. price ceilings have made this market less attractive.

U. S. fruit merchants, done out of a good product, appealed to the Office of Defense Transportation which appealed to the Interstate Commerce Commission, which issued a ban on use of U. S. cars to carry freight from one foreign country to another.

This was aimed at banana cars sent from Mexico across the U. S. A. to Canada. It stopped the shipments, but not for long. Promptly, the Mexican Embassy in Washington protested to the State Department, asking relief from the ban, and Mr. Hull protested to ODT.

Solution probably will be an agreement to limit banana shipments to Canada, cutting off the big shipments, and making more bananas available to the U. S. A.

—JIMMY BYRNES' "WHISKERS"—

Ex-Justice Jimmy Byrnes went out to dinner the other night at the home of his old friend Walter Brown, taking with him the Byrnes' family pet, "Whiskers," a scottie which recently has been featured pictorially in Washington newspapers.

"Whiskers" was tied in the rear garden of the Brown home while the guests went in to dinner. But he protested loudly and vociferously.

"I guess we'll have to do something about 'Whiskers'," Justice Byrnes finally remarked. "He's been taking himself seriously lately. It all comes from getting his picture in the newspapers."

—CAPITAL CHAFF—

People who have talked to the duPonts lately find that they are very much opposed to Wendell Willkie, consider him too progressive, but are very strong for Gov. Dewey . . . . . Senator Styles Bridges of New Hampshire, who has not been so keen about Willkie lately, took a trip through New England this summer and was amazed at Willkie's popularity. In that part of the country, according to Bridges, there is no question whom the Republicans want as their 1944 nominee . . . . . The AFL and CIO got together in Illinois recently and decided that Democratic Senator Scott Lucas's labor record was too reactionary for them. On the other hand his probable Republican opponent for re-election, Richard Lyons, was even worse. So labor groups are now looking around for an independent candidate to run for Senator in Illinois . . . . . Gen. Allen Gullion, efficient Provost Marshal, gets credit for the smooth operation of German-Italian prison camps in the U. S. A.

—WELL-BEHAVED SOLDIERS—

Capt. George Vournas has given friends in the White House one of the finest tributes which could be paid the American army. Writing from North Africa, he says:

"I walked home with a colonel at a late hour in a city in North Africa in control of our troops. On our way we met many unescorted women. We were particularly impressed because when the famous 8th Army was in the same city last year no woman dared walk alone after sunset.

"Our boys behave here as if they were on Connecticut Avenue in Washington. I am sure this exemplary behavior will constitute a great national asset with these people in the future."

YOUTH GUILTY OF NEGLIGENCE

Negligent Driving Cause Of T. B. Tyndall Death, Jury Finds

Alvin Jackovich, 21, of Gladstone was found guilty of negligence by a coroner's jury yesterday afternoon at an inquest into the death of T. B. Tyndall, who died at St. Francis hospital early Sunday morning after being struck by a car driven by Jackovich on county highway 517.

The statement issued by the jury following three hours of testimony was as follows: "We the members of the jury find that T. B. Tyndall met his death through the negligent driving of Alvin Jackovich."

Members of the jury were George Belanger, Carl Norval, G. Nelson, William Petry, Thomas Kristie and M. E. Vandenboom.

Witnesses called by Prosecuting Attorney Torval Strom included Al Johnson, employee of the county road commission, Deputy Sheriff Harold Johnston, Trooper Mason Meyer, and Pearl Hampton, Garnet McGillvary, Melvin Pheiffer, Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Van Dale, all of whom were riding with Jackovich at the time of the accident, in addition to the driver of the car.

Deputy Sheriff Johnston testified that he received a call from hospital authorities that a man had been brought in there, who had been struck by a car, and that after checking concerning the identity of the victim he took the occupants of the car and returned to the scene of the mishap. He found skid marks on the highway about four inches from the left hand side headed north, the point where Jackovich applied his brakes. He checked the distance and found that it was 75 feet from the point where the driver applied the brakes to the point where the car stopped. He testified also that damage to the car included a dent in the hood and a broken right headlight glass.

Trooper Mason Meyer was called to identify pictures which he took at the scene of the accident the following day.

Occupants of the Jackovich car testified regarding their whereabouts prior to the accident. According to their testimony none of them had had more than two glasses of beer to drink and none of them saw Tyndall before they hit him.

Jackovich in his testimony declared that, although his lights were good, it was a clear night and he was watching the highway, he failed to see Tyndall until he was about five feet from him. He stated that the man was walking in the center of the road and he swung the car to the left to avoid hitting him but was unable to do so.

Says Congress Should Air Postwar Policies

BY RAYMOND CLAPPER

Washington—In such discussions as those at Quebec and in the many others that must follow, President Roosevelt's influence would be stronger if clear American public sentiment indicated the main broad lines this nation desired to follow.

When congress returns after its current vacation among the people, it will be in a position to indicate through discussion and resolutions where the American people stand.

A most welcome and constructive reform is being worked out now under the leadership of Senator Vandenberg so that many questions relating to foreign policy may be decided by a majority vote of both houses. In these times it is inviting disaster to make our decisions dependent upon a veto power exercised by one-third of the senate. That requirement has forced the executive to resort to devious methods of avoiding reference to congress at all.

Foreign policy not based on national self-interest is on weak ground. It loses strength also if based alone on presidential edict, arrived at in dead secret and reported by newspaper men working under military restrictions as at the battlefront.

A wise presidential policy will have more force at home and abroad if buttressed by clear evidence of active public support. We do not realize that in foreign countries people remember what happened to Wilson and wonder if it will happen again.

Must Protect Selves

Under such conditions America cannot exert the influence that it should exert. It is not alone things that we might want to do. We also want to prevent others from making decisions that might be against our interests. For self-protection, we need to have our full strength behind our foreign policy.

One of the first questions to be answered is whether we want to use force to make the victory stick. In other words, do we want to compel Germany to disarm and stay disarmed? Do we want to forbid her from making tanks and airplanes, for instance? Do we want to use force in keeping Italy on the safe track? That is a fairly immediate question. How much force we shall use after the armistice is the central question to be decided before we can move on with peace and reconstruction.

Will Require Force

Our side has been confident that might makes right. We have believed that he is thrice armed whose cause is just. We had high ethics. Yet while we disarmed, Japan fortified the Pacific Islands. Britain went blissfully to sleep while Hitler built airplanes. Just a year ago the Axis almost broke through at Suez which might have made victory impossible for us. Our vast resources are being turned into military force that will win, but our indifference to force almost proved our downfall.

The surest way to make the victory mean nothing would be to fight and have our men killed in order to disarm the enemy and force him to surrender—and then permit him to begin rearming. But you will never prevent Germany or Japan from rearming by sitting at the wishing well with little Snow White. We will have to use force to prevent it. That means inspectors. That means bombing fleets ready to move in if there is any violation of disarmament restrictions. Are we ready to face that? We ought to say.

Could Disarm Germany

In such an argument I would strongly favor the side of force. We can disarm a nation and still allow economic and political freedom within the restrictions. American civilians are not permitted to carry concealed weapons. But we are still free citizens, with the ballot, free speech, and opportunity to work our way economically. Could it not be the same with a nation? Germany could be disarmed and still have her elections, free speech and the right to trade everywhere.

That is the kind of broad question that congress, as spokesman for the American people, could decide now.

TRADE SCHOOL IS SHAPING UP

Building Is Renovated; Equipment Being Installed

Work is progressing satisfactorily on the remodeling of the building to house the new Escanaba vocational school, Supt. John A. Lemmer announced yesterday.

The building, last used as office quarters and bottling rooms for the Delta Brewing company, is being entirely renovated for use as a vocational school and when completed, it will provide excellent facilities for wood working, drafting and engineering, printing, auto shop, welding and machine tool classes.

The interior of the building has been repainted and the printing and wood working equipment has been moved from the senior high school building to the new location. Drafting equipment also has been installed and most of the machine tools, secured from the state vocational department, are now in place.

Open To St. Joseph Students

The vocational school office will be located on the first floor with the machine shop and auto mechanics equipment also located on the first floor.

The basement will have one classroom, welding equipment and power sewing machines.

The drafting room will be on the second floor, front, the printing shop in the middle and the wood working shop in the rear.

The vocational classes will be organized at the beginning of the school year in conjunction with academic classes at the high school. Vocational students will probably devote a half day to vocational study and the other half to academic subjects.

The vocational classes will be open to both Escanaba and St. Joseph high school students, Supt. Lemmer announced.

As principal of the Escanaba high school, E. E. Edick will also be the executive officer of the vocational school. Lyle J. Shaw will be director of the school, and assistants will be Ray Shaw and George Grab.

The vocational school will be open to adults for night classes if sufficient interest warrants.

"Hold Firm, We'll Help You"
—Stalin
Chapter 17

A great people, or a strong system, is one that can undergo such a test, as the battle of Moscow, know the danger and rise above it. That, Moscow did. Its nerves were steadied by a supreme display of calmness and confidence on the part of its leaders. On November 7, they went through the ritual observance of the twenty-fourth anniversary of the Bolshevisk Revolution almost under the eyes of the Germans.

On the eve of the anniversary, the Moscow Soviet called its traditional meeting. The Mayakovsky subway station, instead of the Bolshoi Theater, was the scene of the meeting. But the important thing was that it was held, and that Stalin spoke.

The next morning, the Red army paraded on Red Square. Again it was not a foolhardy display. Just as the Moscow Soviet had gone underground for its meeting, so the Red army went through Red Square in thirteen minutes, starting at 8 a. m., three hours before the regular time. But it did hold its parade.

Stalin stood atop Lenin's tomb, muffled to the throat in his long, unadorned greatcoat and wearing his khaki kepi with the little five-pointed red star and the gold-crossed hammer and sickle above the brim. He spoke quietly into a microphone that carried his voice to the amplifiers on the Kremlin wall and sent it reverberating across Red Square.

It is in strenuous circumstances that we are today celebrating the twenty-fourth anniversary of the October Revolution. The perfidious attack of the German brigands and the war which has been forced upon us have placed our country in jeopardy,' he said. 'We have temporarily lost a number of regions, the enemy has appeared at the gates of Leningrad and Moscow.'

No more did he mention the battle of Moscow. Instead, he went on to point out that the Soviet Union had been in even greater difficulty before, in 1918, when three-quarters of the country was occupied, the Russians had no allies, no army, and faced a shortage of food, clothing, and arms, yet emerged victorious. Now, he said, the Soviet position was far better, with the country richer, supported by allies, and defended by a strong army.

Here Stalin, the military genius, made one of his few military miscalculations. Before Russia was invaded, he had overestimated the power of the Balkans to form a front against Germany. Now, he underestimated the power of the Germans to carry on the war.

"The enemy is not so strong as some frightened little intellectuals imagine,' he said. 'The devil is not so terrible as he is painted. Another few months, another half year, perhaps another brief year, and Hitler Germany is bound to burst beneath the weight of its crimes.'

There, Stalin was wrong. A year later, the Germans were to be laying siege to Stalingrad. But they were defeated before Moscow, and Stalin's confidence was an important factor in that defeat.

Nine days later, the battle was on again. The Germans started their second general offensive against Moscow November 16. The great armies collided, the plan and counter-plan started working.

The Germans struck their first blow on the Russian right flank. The third and fourth tank armies attacked in the Volokolamsk sector and farther north toward the Moscow Sea, the artificial body of water forming part of the Moscow-Volga canal system forty miles north of the capital. The panzer divisions drove the Russians behind the Volga, north of the Moscow Sea, and covered their own left flank under this great lake.

Then the offensive spread southward. Part of the German left wing descended on Moscow through Klin, Solnechnogorsk, and Istra, part carried out the encircling maneuver through Yahhroma and Dimitrov toward Zagorsk.

The Germans hit the Russian left flank November 18, when the second tank army attacked southeast of Tula toward Kashira and Riazan. Part of this force pushed up toward Moscow, cutting the Tula-Serpukhov highway, reaching Venev and aproaching Kashira; part struck through Stalinogorsk and Mikhailov toward Riazan and Kolomna, to complete the encirclement.

In the center the Germans broke through in the Narofominsk sector, penetrating the Russian defense twelve to fifteen miles, carrying their advanced forces within twenty-five miles of the capital.

So far the German plan seemed to be succeeding. But the Russian plan also was in full operation. It called, in the first phase, for a stubborn defense. What this meant was exemplified on November 16, the first day of the German offensive, in the Volokolamsk sector, by one of the greatest acts of heroism of the war.

Major-General I. V. Panfilov, a dapper little fellow who had been military commissar of the middle-Asiatic Khirgiz Republic, defended the Volokolamsk-Moscow highway with the 316th Red army infantry division, later to become the 8th Guards infantry division. General Panfilov, died in the field. Twenty-eight of his troops, isolated at one point, died in their trenches. But they exacted, as the price of their lives, eighteen enemy tanks. And they checked the Germans.

The four Moscow Communist divisions went into action in the first lines. They had had little training, there were not enough automatic guns to go around, but they sacrificed their bodies to the defense. Their losses were horrible, but their resistance was strong. In sheer desperation, they delayed the Germans, while in the rear and on the flanks, other forces were gathering.

Those were bright days for the Germans. They had estimated the maximum strength of the Red army at three hundred and thirty divisions. They had counted that number, they thought, in defeat. Now, before them appeared a few ragged new divisions of hastily mobilized workers, fighting with the spirit of demons but without the arms, training, or experience of regular troops. The Germans thought the end was in sight. Berlin editors were advised, December 2, to leave space on their front pages to announce the fall of Moscow.

During the first week of December, the Germans reached their farthest points of advance, cuting the Moscow-Volga canal to the north at Dimitrov, spreading south through Istra, Zvenigorod, and Narofominsk and looping around Tula, north almost to Kashira and east to Mikhailov and Yerifan. The nearest they came to Moscow was the outskirts of the little Moscow-Volga canal port Khimki, five miles north of Moscow, connected with the capital by a commuters' bus line.

Stalin, at that moment of crisis, was in personal command of the defense. Lieutenant-General K. K. Rokossovsky, hard-pressed in the Istra lakes sector, received a telephone call: "Stalin speaking. Report your situation.' The general outlined his position. 'Hold firm, we'll help you,' was the answer. Major-General P. A. Belov, moving into position in the Kashira sector, was called to the telephone, told by the same voice to liquidate the enemy breakthrough at Venez. Other generals, all along the front, had similar experiences.

In the meantime, regularly, as often as every quarter of a hour, trains were passing along railway lines to the front, carrying fresh young troops, dressed in warm winter uniforms and armed to the teeth with modern automatic weapons.

Inside and outside the German armored claws, these reserves stiffened the Russian resistance. The Germans began to scratch vainly for ground. Their left arm was pinned down on the Moscow-Volga canal. Their center was blocked east of Narofominsk. Their right arm was stopped before Kashira. They dangled awkwardly, in danger. The Russians' hour to strike, with their full force, had come.

The Red army launched its counter-offensive on December 6. By December 11, it had achieved these results:

The German flanks were broken, their center rolled back, their campaign ended. They started their retreat.

In the battle of Moscow, from November 16 to December 10, the Soviet high command estimated the Red army killed more than 85,000 Germans, captured or destroyed 1,434 tanks, 5,416 vehicles, 575 field guns, 339 mortars, and 870 machine guns.

The Germans were caught in a trap of their own making. They had made a mistake they were to repeat a year later at Stalingrad. The Allies had often been criticized for doing 'too little, too late.' The Germans undertook' too much too soon.'

Moscow was saved.

WE, the WOMEN

BY RUTH MILLETT

BY RUTH MILLETT

In our sudden zeal to do something about juvenile delinquency, there seems to be a danger that our courts will interfere too much with the parental privilege of bringing up our own children in the way we think best.

Here's an example: An Iowa judge recently sentenced a father to five days in jail because he was accused of taking his 17-year-old son into a tavern and buying him a bottle of beer. He could hand down that sentence because a city ordinance forbids minors from entering taverns.

Most fathers probably wouldn't buy a 17-year-old son a bottle of beer. Nor should they.

Yet in some special instance, a father might have a good reason for doing so. He might know, for instance, that his boy was drinking with the other boys—maybe on the sly. If so, the father might figure that it would bet better to invite the boy in for a bottle of beer, and try to get out of his head the idea that he has to drink in order to show the fellows that he isn't tied to his family's apronstrings.

Or the father of a boy within one year of draft age might think it wise to teach him before he goes into service that there is a difference between a bottle of beer with some friendly conversation and going out and getting drunk just to be able to brag about it the next day.

DAD KNOWS BEST

Those are ways in which some fathers might reason. And it does look as though a 17-year-old kid is better off having a bottle of beer with his own father than being out drinking with a gang of kids his own age.

If we want to encourage parents to try to understand their adolescent kids and spend some time with them, throwing them in jail for buying them a bottle of beer hardly seems the best approach.

We may be getting over-zealous in interfering with parental judgment. Carried to an extreme, that would give us a generation of regimented youth.

Tigers Score Third Shutout In Four Games; Wyatt Stops Cubs, 6-3

OVERMIRE HAS BRILLIANT DAY

Detroit Boosted Into Sole Possession Of Third Place

BY WATSON SPOELSTRA

Detroit, Aug. 20 (AP)—Rookie Frank (Stub) Overmire pitched a brilliant five-hitter today to give the Detroit Tigers a narrow 1 to 0 victory over the Boston Red Sox, the third shutout in four games for the Detroiters.

The Tigers meanwhile were limited to three hits in eight innings by Joe Dobson, but in the ninth Roger Cramer singled, moved up on a sacrifice and scored on Rudy York's third hit of the game, a single to center field. The triumph gave the Tigers a three to one edge in the series that ends tomorrow.

Moreover, the triumph boosted Detroit into sole possession of the American League's third place ahead of the Cleveland Indians who lost to the New York Yankees.

One Pass Issued

Overmire, stocky southpaw from Grand Rapids via Western Michigan College, let Boston get a runner past first base in only one inning, the third. Skeeter Newsome opened with a single but was forced by Dobson. Overmire then issued his lone pass to Eddie Lake, and both runners advanced on an infield out before Overmire induced George Metkovich to ground out.

The five Boston hits were spread over five innings, and only one came after the fourth. Catcher Roy Partee singled with one out in the seventh but was left as Overmire retired the side. Boston went out in order the last two frames.

Overmire thus gained his sixth victory of the season against five defeats. He has three shutouts.

Dobson owned a one-hitter going into the seventh when Detroit opened with singles by Dick Wakefield and York but could not bring a run home. Pinky Higgins, attempting to push the ball to right field, hit into a double play, and Ned Harris rolled out.

Gorsica Next

York drove in his 82nd run of the season to push himself near the league lead. Confining himself to singles, York fell behind in his home run campaign and now needs eight round-trippers in twelve games to crack the major league mark for one month's production.

In their home stand, the Tigers now have won eleven and lost four.

Johnny Gorsica will get the assignment as a starting pitcher tomorrow a gainst Mike Ryba of Boston. The Yankees arrive Sunday for a double-header that opens a seven-game series to be played in four days.

DIAMOND BALL

CADET LEAGUE

Groos and Co. of the Webster playground strengthened their hold on first place in the Cadet league by defeating the Royce Park Champs, 12 to 10, Wednesday night at No. 1 diamond. Wickholm of the Champs was the hitting star of the game getting three hits in three trips to the plate, including a triple with the bases loaded. The Groos and Co. hitting was pretty well divided with Nyquist, Goymerac and Belanger each getting two hits. After getting away to a late start, the game was called after six complete innings because of darkness.

OLDTIMERS LOSE

A seventh inning rally proved too much for the Royce Park Oldtimers and they dropped the contest to the Northwestern All Stars, 21-20. The Royce gang were leading 19-14 going into the seventh, but couldn't hold the lead.

Series Squared Up By Boston Braves

Boston, Aug. 20, (AP)—The Boston Braves squared their series with the Cincinnati Reds today by gaining a 3-1 12-inning triumph over Johnny Vander Meer.

"Whitey" Wietelmann, whose bat produced one of the earlier Boston runs, singled home pinch-runner Phil Masi in the 12th for the winning counter. The first Red run came on Al Javery's wild pitch in the second while Lonnie Frey drove in another in the fifth.

BARNYARD GOLF POPULAR

Horseshoe pitching has rivaled softball in popularity at the city playgrounds this summer, playground leaders report. A large number of players, both juniors and seniors, have taken to the game and barnyard golf courts are busy hour after hour. Joe Gardner who won the city championship Wednesday night is reported to be the standout performer. They say that Gardner tosses ringers with such regularity that his opponents just don't get a lok-in.

Surprising to playground directors is the apparent apathy among the tennis players. The tennis courts in past years were busy all of the time but this year the courts have received only a nominal play. The shuffleboard courts also have shown a decline in popularity.

PIN SEASON NEAR

As time approaches for the start of a new bowling season here, it appears a certainty that Freddie Olmsted, the master mind of bowling in Escanaba for many years, will stand pat upon his decision announced last spring to retire from management of the Arcade alleys. When Olmsted reported near the close of the last bowling season that he was quitting the bowling business, friends snickered. Freddie would be back, they said.

It is reported, however, that Olmsted, is standing pat and that the owners of the Arcade are considering applications for a new manager. Grapevine rumors say that Joe Rodman, formerly of Hermansville, has the inside track for the appointment. Rodman managed the IXL alleys at Hermansville for 10 years where he did an excellent job in expanding the popularity of bowling. At present Rodman is located in Wayne, Michigan, but is anxious to return to the upper peninsula.

MADDY HORN, GUARD

Ice skating fans will be pleased to learn that Maddy Horn, the Beaver Dam, Wisconsin speed skater, is now working at the Allis-Chalmers plant in West Allis as a guard, but that she is keeping in good physical trim for the day when she can lay down her artillery and pick up her skates again. She is rapidly acquiring proficiency on the pistol and rifle range, and adds, "We have these guns for just one purpose. We'll use them, too, if we have to."

Maddy appeared at Escanaba ice skating races several years ago and earned a lot of friends in this area. Miss Horn has emphasized that she has no thought of retiring from speed skating but that she has only put away the skates for the duration.

THE PIGSKIN THUDS

Kingsford's football team will begin practice sessions next Monday and Coach Tim Barry is quick to point out that the Flivvers, who divided the upper peninsula championship last season with Calumet, will have only three lettermen returning, none of them backfield men. The Flivvers will play a seven game scheduled, barring cancellations, with an open date on Oct. 1.

Another team, or more accurately the other team that took the measure of the Eskymos last season, Norway, began football practice sessions Wednesday. Coach Allen Ronberg's squad also was hard hit by graduation but six lettermen have returned. The Vikings face a shortage in reserve power but expect the first string eleven to be somewhat heavier than last year. The Vikings have an eight game schedule, opening with Brunelle's Stephenson team on Sept. 4.

BEACH CLOSES HERE SUNDAY

Swimming Is Prohibited At Park After Lifeguards Leave

The Municipal Beach at Ludington Park will close for the season this Sunday, August 22nd, the City Recreation department announced yesterday. For the past week, unseasonable weather has kept swimmers away and lifeguards who started beach duty immediately following school have requested that the beach be closed to allow for a brief vacation before starting school duties again. Although there may be brief periods when weather permitted swimming, experience of other summers has shown that after cooler weather starts that few people use the beach and that it is economically unwise to maintain it. All swimming after Sunday is prohibited and any persons doing so will be liable to penalty.

Instruction classes during the summer have been well attended, according to Naomi Vinette, head lifeguard. Those succesfully passing tests are as follows:

Beginners—Jerry Jensen, Phyllis Villemure, Beverly Peters, Betty Lieper, Glenna Fallmer, Stephaine Garber, Nancy Layman, Bill Fallmer, William Rockburg, Jean Myrsten.

Swimmers—Carol Lieper, Conrad Driscoll, Donald Desilets, Jerry Gleich.

Intermediates — Bill Lemmer, George High, Dick Lough, Charles Baker, John Degnan, Dick Cleereman, Bill Cleereman.

Junior life saving — Conrad Driscoll, Donald Desilets, Gerald Gleich, Richard Lough.

Senior life saving — Michael Kuchenberg, William Vachon.

In addition to local courses, five persons, including Virginia and Helen LaChance of Escanaba, successfully completed an instructor's course given by Midwestern Chapter of the American Red Cross. Virginia LaChance instructed the intermediate class and assisted Miss Vinette in teaching and examining in other tests. Helen Lachance, Michael Kuchenberg, Bill Vachon and Charles Michael Kidd assisted in lifeguard duty on a part time basis.

INDIAN CREW IS OUTSLUGGED

Cleveland, Aug. 20, (AP)—The New York Yankees outslugged the Cleveland Indians today for a 10 to 5 victory that evened their series at two-all and gave them a chance to capture their 11th consecutive series in the finale tomorrow.

The Yankees waded into five Cleveland pitchers for 14 hits and had little trouble winning although Atley Donald, who was resurrected as a starting pitcher for New York, was relieved in the seventh after Jeff Heath had hit his 12th home run with one on.

MAROONS STILL WITHOUT COACH

But Menominee Football Candidates Begin Practice

Menominee.—Menominee high without a coach—started practice Friday with Tom Chambers, faculty member, supervising the drills.

In the meantime Upper Peninsula high school football will be about the same as other years in some schools and in the same boat as Menominee in others.

Negaunee high school is making efforts to play night football and Marquette county schools are going ahead as usual. Coach George Ruwitch has already started football at Escanaba, and drills have started at Sault Ste. Marie.

Bessemer Coach Drafted

Bessemer, scheduled to start soon, had its new coach drafted. Coach Joseph Saitta of Monroe, N. Y., had just arrived at Bessemer to start training when he received a call from his South Bend, Ind., draft board.

Iron River may or may not play Menominee as scheduled here October 16. The Iron River school board has hired Hoyt Ferm of Negaunee, as football coach but games with Calumet and Bessemer have already been dropped and the Menominee game may also be cancelled.

Ohman And Eliason Win In Shuffleboard

Don Ohman and Lloyd Eliason defeated Walter Brown and Bevier Butts in the finals of the men's doubles division of the third annual shuffleboard tournament which finished Thursday night. The champions successfully defended the title won last year when they defeated Olson and LaFave in the championship match.

In the girls' doubles division Joyce Vanlerberghe and Anna May Servis defeated Paula Flath and Catherine Goedert for the championship. Lloyd Eliason teamed with Anna May Servis and they defeated Don Ohman and Joyce Vanlerberghe for the mixed doubles title. Beatrice Costley who entered the tournament this year for the first time had strong competition but had too much experience for her opponents and won the women's singles division. Anna May Servis was runner-up.

Jinx Pounces on Many Fighters in New York Garden

BY WHITNEY MARTIN

New York, Aug. 20 (AP)—The conversational waves were lapping gently on Jacobs beach, lap after lap. Dumb Dan Morgan wasn't around or he would have been three laps ahead of everyone. Dumb Dan is a one-man oratorical contest and nobody else has a chance when he's around.

Anyway, the subject of the Madison Square Garden jinx was brought up, and the beachcombers were trying to recall some typical examples of fighters who were stars outside of New York but who folded up when they came here.

Walter St. Denis mentioned Jeff Smith as a prime example. Smith, he said, could lick anybody around his weight, including Harry Greb, when out of town, but was a dismal flop here.

Griffith Jinxed

Fred Lenhart was mentioned as another allergic to the big city. And there was Bob Pastor, whose best fights always were out of town. And young Peter Jackson, who was a sensation in California but who was brought back here twice to fail each time.

Tuffy Griffith came here with a great rep, only to be belted out in two rounds by Jim Braddock, who at that time wasn't considered so much. Lee Savold, after a fine start against Jim Robinson, was a lively as a hitching post when he met Billy Conn later. His right hand still must be hanging in the air around the Garden someplace, good as new. He lifted it, cocked it and left it there.

Bobby Ruffin, who fought in the Garden last night, is another whose reputation is based primarily on his appearances outside of New York, and Tippy Larkin has never overcome the Garden jinx, although Tippy is quite impartial. He doesn't care where he gets put to sleep.

Harry Markson, the other half of the St. Denis-Markson publicity duet, has it pretty well figured out why some able lads become pushovers when they reach the Garden.

"Madison Square Garden," he explains, "is the goal of all fighters. When they finally get their chance there they're liable to tighten up in their eagerness to make good. Besides, the place is impressive.

"I remember once a manager brought his boy there the afternoon before the boy was to fight there for the first time. He made the mistake of taking the kid up from the dressing room for a look at the arena.

Shock Too Much

"I was standing right there. The only other person in sight was a man in the ring tightening the ropes. The place seemed as big as all outdoors, with its tier upon tier of empty seats and the echo of slight noise made by the man in the ring bouncing around endlessly.

"I was watching the kid. He came up the steps, took one look, and stopped. His mouth became a fly-trap as his jaw sagged. His eyes roved over that vast expanse of space. Finally he blurted: "Gosh!" He was a horizontal exclamation mark in the first round of his fight that night. He never got over the shock of seeing the place for the first time."

Harry also remarked that there was another fighter whose Garden performances were so dismal compared with his out-of-town showings that they thought of covering the sign outside the Garden with one reading: "Kalamazoo Athletic Club" or some such name to make the guy feel at home.

The one outstanding exception to this stage fright in the big city was Joe Louis, although his first appearance wasn't in the Garden. It was at the Polo Grounds, which is worse yet. Everyone was talking about what a shame it was to bring a young fellow like that to such a place to meet a giant like Primo Carnera. Louis had been a pro less than a year.

"They didn't need to worry about him," Markson recalls. "I can see him yet just taking Carnera by the elbow and lifting him around to where he wanted him. Nothing could upset Joe."

Harold Weber Wins Horseshoe Title

Harold Weber won the midget horseshoe title at Royce Park Friday afternoon by trimming Gary Abrahamson 25-10, 25-5 in the finals. The tournament was played on junior courts in which the pegs are only thirty feet apart instead of the regulation forty feet.

In the first round Abrahamson down Stanley Sarasin 25-6, 25-0, and Vernon McCarthy trimmed William Nelson 25-9, 25-9. In the second round Weber won from McCarthy 25-20, 25-6.

HITS BUNCHED OFF DERRINGER

Dodger Pitcher Argues With Umpire; Homerun Hit By Nicholson

Brooklyn, Aug. 20, (AP)—Whitlow Wyatt pitched and argued his way to a 6 to 3 victory for the Brooklyn Dodgers over the Chicago Cubs today, allowing six hits of which one was Bill Nicholson's 19th home run and second in two days with a mate aboard.

Wyatt jawed with Umpire Tom Dunn about his judgement of balls and strikes and also got into a dispute with Manager Jimmy Wilson of the Cubs, who came charging from the dugout ready for battle only to have umpires and players restrain the two.

But Wyatt didn't let this interfere with his pitching and his teammates effectively bunched their seven blows off Paul Derringer and John Burrows.

SEEDY GIANTS CAPTURE PAIR

New York, Aug. 20, (AP)—Truett (Rip) Sewell, the leading pitcher of the major leagues, took another tumble today as the Pittsburgh Pirates dropped a double-header to the ragged New York Giants 3 to 2 and 7 to 4.

Sewell, who has achieved fame and 18 victories this season with his freak "parachute pitch," gave up ten hits in the first game and one of them spelled his fifth defeat. It was Mel Ott's 17th home run with Joe Medwick on base in the sixth inning.

Sid Gordon drove in five of New York's runs and Elbie Fletcher hit a homer for the Pirates in the ninth in the nightcap.

First game:

Pittsburgh	000 002 000	2	8 2
New York	001 002 00x	3	10 1

Sewell and Baker; Chase and Mancuso.

Second game:

Phil-Card Series Square At Two-All

Philadelphia, Aug. 20 (AP)—Scoring all their runs in the sixth inning, the St. Louis Cardinals squared their series with the Phillies at two-all with a 5 to 1 victory before 12,678 paying fans at Shibe Park tonight.

Mort Cooper allowed only five hits, but was removed in the ninth when the Phillies filled the bases with one out. Howie Krist came in and retired the last two batters on pop-ups. Bill Lee, the Phillies' starter, gave the Cards all of their twelve hits in his eight innings on the mound.

Score by innings:

St. Louis	000 005 000	5	12 1
Philadel'hia	010 000 000	1	5 1

M. Cooper, Krist and W. Cooper; Lee, Kimball and Moore.

Wistert-Wildung All-Star Captains

Chicago, Aug. 20, (AP)—Al Wistert of Michigan and Dick Wildung of Minnesota, both tackles, were named co-captains of the college all-stars today for Wednesday night's contest with the Washington Redskins Dyche Stadium, Evanston.

The all-stars dispensed with a morning workout but attended a lecture in which members of the coaching staff explained detailed plans for defense against Sammy Baugh's passes and the Redskins' ground attack.

Meanwhile the professional champions put in their first solid workout since arriving here from their preliminary training base at San Diego, Calif. Baugh appeared to shake off the lame feeling in his back and rubber-armed passes up and down the Loyola university gridiron.

Sergeant Turnesa Leads Golf Match

BY CHARLES CHAMBERLAIN

Chicago, Aug. 20, (AP)—Staff Sergeant Ji mTurnesa of Staten Island, N. Y., carried the colors of the Army into the 18 hole lead of the Chicago Victory national golf meet today, using a torrid putter to melt four strokes from the Beverly course par for a card of 35-32—67.

The stocky little sergeant, one of the youngest members of the famed Turnesa golfing tribe, thus began another dark horse gallop through a chosen field of 41 top performers, reminiscent of his great ride in the 1942 P.G.A. tournament—when he knocked off Ben Hogan and Byron Nelson enroute to the final championship round which he lost 2 and 1 to Sammy Snead. Mike Turnesa of White Plains, N. Y., also was among the front runners with a 70 but brother Joe Turnesa of Rockville Center, N. Y., kited to a 78.

Sgt. Jim held a one-stroke advantage over Sam Byrd of Philadelphia, one-time understudy for Babe Ruth with the New York Yankees and Lord Byron Nelson of Toled

STOCKS GIVEN BAD SET-BACK

BY BERNARD S. O'HARA

New York, Aug. 20 (AP)—Gold mines exhibited quiet strength in today's stock market but leaders generally were subjected to sufficient pressure to put the majority down fractions to more than 2 points.

The Associated Press 60-stock average suffered its worst set-back since August 2, dropped .5 of a point to 49.8 where it was off 3.5 points from its 1943 peak established in mid-July. The market still lacked breadth, only 775 issues being traded. Of these, 477 were lower, 118 higher and 180 unchanged. Transfers totalled 543,559 shares compared with 468,727 Thursday.

Conspicuous on the downside were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Santa Fe, Louisville & Nashville, Western Union, Chrysler, Goodrich, U. S. Rubber, Sears Roebuck, Deere, Douglas Aircraft, Pan American Airways, United Air Lines, Standard Oil (N. J.), Air Reduction, Du Pont, Eastman Kodak, Allied Chemical and Westinghouse.

Southern Pacific kept its loss to ¼ as satisfaction was expressed over the $1 dividend voted after the preceding close. Kennecott was up ¼ in the wake of a 25-cent dividend and a special 50-cent declaration on the common, the same as paid at this time last year.

Homestake Mining and McIntyre Porcupine were up a point each and fractional improvement was retained by Dome and Alaska Juneau.

Lake Shore and Pioneer Gold edged forward in the curb but minus signs were pinned on Cities Service, Aluminum of America, Cuban Atlantic Sugar and Phoenix Securities. Turnover here was 126,055 shares versus 134,920 the day before.

PRESSURE FELT BY RAIL LIENS

New York, Aug. 20 (AP)—Selling pressure increased against railroad issues in today's bond market, resulting in numerous declines of fractions to a point or so in that group. Other corporates remained narrow and mixed as in recent sessions.

Activity was again of the slow motion variety with sales at $5,483,750 compared with $5,245,000 on Thursday. Today marked the passing of more than two weeks since volume reached $10,000,000 for a full session.

Under water at the close were, among others, St. Paul 4½s, Rock Island 4s, Colorado & Southern 4½s, Florida East Coast 5s, International Telephone 5s, International Great Northern 5s and 6s, Soo Line 5s, Missouri Pacific 5s, Northern States Power 3¼s, Rio Grande Western 4s and "Frisco 4s.

Resistant were Union Pacific first 4s, Allegheny 5s, Bush Terminal 5s, North Western 4s, Chicago & Western Indiana 4s and Erie 4s and 4½s.

U. S. governments were mostly in light supply at small concessions on the stock exchange and in outside markets.

Australia 5s, Canada 4s, and Cuba 4½s were among foreign issues bought at higher levels.

CHICAGO GRAIN

Chicago, Aug. 20 (AP)—Wheat retreated toward the close today and final prices were down almost a cent. Failure of several small attempts to push the market higher discouraged traders and buying support was withdrawn late in the session. Rye and oats turned reactionary with the bread cereal.

LUMBER GOALS ARE NOT MET

Project Set Up To Step Up Production In Lake States

"The 1943 lumber production goals for the north central region, as set by the War Production Board, are not being attained,' stated Jay H. Price, regional forester of the United States forest service today, in opening the meeting of the area foresters whose duty it will be to stimulate production of critical lumber requirement.

"So that you may have a little of the background of this timber production war project," continued Price, "I wish to take a little of your time to outline it, so that you will not think that we are undertaking the impossible.

"This project, as you may know is a cooperative project, manned by the various state conservation departments, the agricultural colleges, the extension service and other federal bureaus, under the coordinating direction of the forest service.

"Some have had a misconception of this project and have thought the the government is going to go into the logging and milling business. That belief is of course entirely erroneous. This program is designed to stimulate production in existing operations, whether it be in the woods, in transportation, or in the mills that are not operating at full capacity. It is going to be our job to find these operations, study their problems, and aid in their solution.

Many Sawmills Idle

"This project is not nationwide but confined to that portion of the country east of the great plains, where it is estimated that there are some 35,000 small mills, many of which are idle or are not working to capacity. Separately they do not produce much, but collectively they can be made to make a tremendous contribution to the war effort. The project will deal with all owners and operators, large or small, who are in need of assistance.

"Your area foresters will coordinate the work of all interested federal and state agencies, county agricultural services, and other local organizations. It is also your job to break the bottlenecks at the state level which are hampering production. You have a big job. You are not in the uniform of any of the armed services, but your job, just as that of every woods worker and processor, is just as important. You and they are the men behind the men behind the gun," concluded Mr. Price.

In attendance at the meeting were area foresters who will have charge of the project coordination work in the various states: Charles Burton of Lansing, Mich.; Galen Pike of Rhinelander, Wis.; Russell Cunningham of St. Paul, Minn.; H. A. Svensen of Columbus, Ohio; Rudolph Grabow of Bedford, Indiana; Arlie Toole of Harrisburg, Ill.; George White of Jefferson, Mo.; and G. B. MacDonald of Ames, Iowa.

In Memoriam

In loving memory of our dear husband and father, Alex Girard, who passed away three years ago today, August 21, 1940.

A loved one from us has gone,
A cheerful voice is stilled.
A place is vacant in our home,
Which never can be filled.
God in His wisdom has recalled
The joy His life has given.
And though his body slumber here on earth,
We hope to meet in Heaven.

Sadly missed by his WIFE AND CHILDREN.

YIELD IN TRUCK CROPS IS LIGHT

Carrots, Celery, Onions And Cantaloupes Not Up To Par

Lansing, Aug. 20. (AP)—Householders received discouraging news regarding four major truck crops today from the federal-state crop reporting service. It reported thus:

Cantaloupes — Peak movement from the early fields in southwestern Michigan began August 15 and is expected to be in fair volume for about a week. The crop is small and offerings will be light. If vines hold in late fields, the harvest should extend well into September.

Carrots — The harvest of early carrots has started but yields are not up to expectations. Most of the acreage will be harvested in October.

Celery—The movement of Michigan celery will be light for about two weeks with the supplies coming mostly from Muskegon and Hamilton. By the first week in September most offerings will come from the Decatur, Hudsonville and Grant areas.

Onions—The harvest of whites and yellows has started but some growers are disappointed in their yields and the sizes will run from medium to small in most fields. Yields and sizes in the Grant crop will be above the state average and most onions in the Gunn swamp area will be medium sized and good quantity.

two battalions of defending Germans were wiped out. The dogged Germans brought up more reserves and counter-attacked, but failed to regain the position and the Soviets pressed on, Moscow said.

Over 1,000 Nazi soldiers were killed in one day's fighting in this sector. The Russian advance threatened to pierce a whole series of German defenses between Bryansk and Smolensk, the center front anchor, and guns and prisoners were taken. In air combat 27 German planes were reported shot down.

All Cards Released For Liquor Rations

Lansing, Aug. 20. (AP)—The state liquor control commission relaxed its regulations today to permit persons who neglected to pick up their liquor ration permits by last Wednesday to get them at their will.

The order, Chairman R. Glenn Dunn said, does not allow persons who failed to apply for permits before the deadline to do so yet. They must wait until a later date, he said.

Reversing its previous decision that delinquent applicants must wait until after Labor Day, the commission instructed state retail states and package liquor dealers to release all cards in their possession as called for.

Dunn said also the commission had obtained permission from the war department to expedite the issuance of rationed liquor to servicemen on furloughs. He said members of the armed forces, if of legal age, might obtain a liquor quota by presenting furlough papers to a dealer. The papers will be punched in the upper right hand corner in the same manner civilians' ration cards are punched.

American Civilians Interned In Japan May Be Home Soon

Washington, Aug. 20. (AP)—Hundreds of American civilians interned by Japan may be home for Christmas—if Tokyo will give assurances of safety for an exchange ship.

Sumner Welles, acting secretary of state, announced at his press conference today that safe conduct had been requested for the Swedish liner Gripsholm and that the government has "good reason to hope" a second exchange of Japanese for American civilians can be carried out in Portuguese India by October 15.

Allowing time for the voyage from India to an American port this should bring the internees home for the holidays. Most of them have been in Japanese hands since December 7, 1941.

Welles did not say when the list of Americans expected home on the Gripsholm would be made public. Last year the passenger list was not issued until the Americans were safely aboard the exchange ship.

Income Tax Revenue Passes $430,000,000

Washington, Aug. 20, (AP)—Receipts under the new pay-as-you-go income tax law passed the $430,000,000 mark today as Internal Revenue Commissioner Guy T. Helvering issued another reminder to some 15,000,000 Americans that they have another date with his office coming up.

Helvering said all federal income tax payers will receive copies within the next few days of the new "declaration of estimated income and victory tax."

I'd Rather Be Right

By Samuel Grafton

It is a grand triumph to have captured Sicily without knowing what we intend to do with it. I say this quite sincerely. It is a triumph of organization, a triumph of the spirit of democratic compromise. The debate back home as to what we ought to do with conquered territory has not kept us and our Allies from conquering same.

We conquer, in a sense, in the spirit in which we live; we do both as a kind of day-to-day proposition. We do not care much, at the moment, for final purposes. If the only way to get through the day is to conquer Sicily, well, then, let us conquer Sicily and get through the day.

The Year for Fighting

And we do it. It is not wholly bad. I like, and I believe the world likes, the American soldier and his spirit of competent willingness without fanaticism; the soldier who is equally ready for a battle or a furlough, and is able to concentrate business-like attention upon either one.

However, the world presses us for explanations. What do we intend to do with Europe? We find it ever harder to say (what is true) that we do not have the least idea. We have no national purpose beyond not being beaten. We are not like professional Germans, who cannot take a drink of water without reflecting that it is German water, created specially for German kidneys, which, in turn, were specially designed with an eye toward the conquest of the world. We drink because we are thirsty. We fight because this is the year for fighting. If it were the year for peace, we would be just as pleased, or more so. We do not fight because we want a certain state of affairs to be established ten years from now; we fight because fighting is the assigned task for this year, without which we cannot get through the year safely or well.

The good thing about us is that, even though we do not look beyond the corner of this year, we are still able to fight like hell.

We Make Up a Few

But the world continues to demand long-range reasons. So we invent some. We are going to occupy Germany; we are going to take over German schools and teach democracy in them; we are going to destroy Germany as a military force, etc., etc.

But these are not actually our aims at all. There are merely things it is possible to say without starting too much of a dispute at home. So we say them. They sound ferocious. Actually, when we do conquer territory, as in Sicily, our administration of it is quite mild. It is day-to-day administration, just as our fighting is day-to-day fighting; we fix the waterworks and set up traffic policemen, and then we call it a job, content to let next year take care of itself.

We put some fascists in jail, but, on the whole, we probably concentrate more strenuously on exterminating the local mosquitoes.

No Margin for Error

Well, we built America in just that day-to-day way, and a good job, too. The difficulty, as one very able student of history has remarked to me, is that we need an enormous margin for error in order to succeed so aimlessly. You have to be very rich and have a lot of time to be able to make huge mistakes and still recover from them; rich enough to cut down forests that should never have been cut down, to dig up soil that should never have been dug up, and still get by. Is there such a wide margin for error in Europe?

Probably not. The war is fluid and fast; on any Friday morning a major political decision may be needed. The Russians have already offered, unofficially, to respect the borders of a democratic Germany. We offer only our formless good will, which sometimes finds verbal expression, merely for want of anything else to say, as ill will. When the critical moment comes, a week's delay, or a day's may be enough to make us miss the bus on its only trip this century.

There is almost no margin for error in Europe. This is not the slow upbuilding of an empty continent. This is a precise and critical operation. We cannot trust to luck. Luck is going to play as much part in the shaping of the new Europe as it does in boring cylinder heads.

of the islands in allied possession, headquarters announced today, winning absolute control of the sea between Sicily and lower Italy and improving positions for any jump onto the mainland.

Other bomber squadrons ripped up rail lines and targets south of Naples and elsewhere—downing six more axis planes—and British warships joined this phase of the softening attack by hurling shells into Scalea, on the west coast of the Calabrian peninsula.

Seizure of Lipari, largest of the Aeolian islands, and Stromboli apparently was unopposed.

Stromboli is but 37 miles from Cape Vaticano, well up on the Italian boot, and Lipari lies 55 miles northwest of Messina. Italy had used them as forward observation points. Although they can handle only small boats, they would be strategically important in invasion of the Italian mainland.

Schooner In Flames

Meanwhile Mitchells escorted by Lightnings dared heavy anti-aircraft fire to put bomb bursts on railroad yards at Salerno, south of Naples, and Marauders wrecked a big oil installation at Sapri while their Lightning protectors swooped down to punish railway cars and shops there.

Fighter-bombers hit Catanzaro, communications center on the sole of the Italian boot, and Wellingtons returned to Sapri by night and also bombed Paolo on the Italian instep.

Landing barges at sea were hit and Beaufighters left a schooner in flames off Civita Vecchia.

Fives planes downed in these sweeps plus one destroyed during the night brought axis plane losses to 44 ships in 36 hours.

Seventeen allied planes were lost, headquarters said, but it was not stated how many were destroyed over Foggia.

BY WILLIAM SMITH WHITE

London, Aug. 20, (AP)—Italy was plainly a sick belligerent tonight, with her king issuing to the people of Sicily a proclamation which was silent about any intention to go on fighting the war. There was considerable feeling that allied armies might move next against fresher and stronger objectives than the cracked axis southern wall.

Although it is far too early to play the bugles of conquest over the Italians, King Vittorio Emanuele's curious and timorous message to the people and the loss of seven more Italian islands to the U. S. Navy—the Aeolian group off the west coast—were immensely heartening to the allied world.

What the king told the people of Sicily in effect was that although they now are "cut off" from the rest of Italy and have for the present nothing but things to grieve about, they should hold faith "in a better future."

In this future, said said, Italy—and he presented the country as a wounded nation with more hope for the future than reasoned confidence for the present—would await her "resurrection."

"The future will bring a reward for your sufferings," the king said in the proclamation, which was broadcast by the Rome radio and recorded by the Associated Press.

"I have lived with you this terrible moment," the king told Sicilians. "I have heard your voice. I have understood your sufferings.

"Italians of Sicily, your king is near to you."

He called insistently for Sicily's loyalty to the crown and the House of Savoy. For years the Sicilians have been regarded as tepid in regard to Fascism.

A later Rome broadcast indicated that the proclamation was an attempt to forestall a separatist movement, rather than an implication that peace might be near at hand.

Danes Consider Open Rebellion Against Hitler

over all of Denmark.

Such a step might precipitate a general strike. Danish labor leaders decided during the past week that they would consent to slowdowns and strikes as a countermeasure to German efforts to punish saboteurs.

Besides blasting railway lines—especially those said to be carrying soldiers and supplies for Nazi occupation forces in Norway—the saboteurs hit at least 60 Danish factories in the past ten days, a traveler said.

The drastic measures taken by the Germans to curb opposition in Norway has created bitter resentment among the Danes, who took the cue for their own stiffening belligerency from the success of the Swedish people in halting without reprisal the transport of German troops and war supplies over Swedish railways.

ALBERTA MILL WILL REOPEN

Ford Visits Lumbering Properties In Baraga Co.

Lumbering activities of the Ford Motor Co. in Baraga county will be increased in the near future as the result of a visit by Henry Ford, president of the company, last week. Mr. Ford came to the district unaccompanied by other company officials and made an inspection of Ford properties at L'Anse, Pequaming and Alberta.

Immediately following his visit in Baraga county, it was stated that the saw mill at Alberta, a model plant with modern housing facilities for employes, will be reopened this week. The number of workers to be employed has not been determined but the mill will be in operation before the end of the week. The Alberta plant is intact and can be placed in production on short notice.

The reopening of the Pequaming mill, which also is intact is being considered by Ford officials. The reopening of the Pequaming plant will depend on the availability of logs under existing manpower conditions.

The L'Anse mill will continue to operate on a one-shift basis as at present, but production may be increased later if the logging situation improves.

Gries Asks Permit For Boys Under 18 To Take Mine Jobs

Lansing, Aug. 20, (AP)—Walter F. Gries, mining company executive and chairman of the state social welfare commission, said today he had petitioned the state department of labor and industry to permit the employment of boys under 18 years of age at non-hazardous surface jobs around mines.

Gries asserted "it is no more hazardous for a young man of 16 or 17 to paint a surface property or do some other surface job which does not endanger him, than it would be to employe him at similar tasks elsewhere. Michigan's iron and copper mines face labor shortages which hamper them at a time when the cry is for more and more production. It would help materially if the request were granted."

He said the department had agreed to send investigators to the mines to study the request.

Fort Custer Has Turned Out Nearly 300,000 Soldiers

Fort Custer, Mich., Aug. 20 (AP)—Maj. Gen. Henry S. Aurand, commanding general of the Sixth Service Command, addressing the largest review of troops here since World War I, said today that nearly 300,000 men have passed through the Fort Custer recruit reception center since the post's activation as a permanent army post three years ago and warned that the effort to be required of troops during the remainder of 1943 is more than double that required in 1942.

Every unit on the post was represented in the hour-long line of march which passed the reviewing stand and filed later into the field to hear the general's address, his first to all troops here since he assumed his command.

Final Test Is Seen For Kenny Treatment

BY HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE
Associated Press Science Editor

New York—The scattered epidemics of infantile paralysis, now threatening to break all records since 1934, promise to give the new Kenny treatment its final American test.

This summer, for the first time since the tall, gray Australian nurse, Elizabeth Kenny, astonished our medical profession with a new idea of the nature of the muscular paralysis, there are likely to be enough cases to settle doubts.

The value of her wizardry as a nurse never has been doubted. But many physicians have remained unconvinced that her nursing method alone would in the long run greatly reduce the aftermath of cripples.

In the very first summer when she threw away the splints and immobilization common to American practice, and substituted her moist hot packs and gentle movement of small, stricken limbs, enthusiasm ran so high that nearly everyone adopted the technique.

Not enough cases were treated by other methods to serve as a yardstick for finally valuing her work. The results of her nursing treatment were remarkakble when compared with some previous summers. But the total cases that year were relatively small. And there is always a chance that the disease may be milder in some years than others, and such mildness could confuse the results.

The high point in the doubts of experts is the fact that the nursing apparently does not attack the disease, but only its after-effects. Some physicians hold that nursing alone may not be enough.

Report New Treatment

However, the possible dividends of Sister Kenny's 30-year battle, in Australia and here, are not confined to her nursing technique. Only this month the Journal of the American Medical Association reported a new medical treatment, credied by its authors to the inspiration of Sister Kenny's idea.

This idea conceives the stricken muscles as being in spasm, which is described as a tightening-up coupled with resistance to the normal stretching of a muscle when it moves. Re-examining the paralysis, with this idea in mind, two physicians of the University of Minnesota School of Medicine, Herman Kabat and Miland E. Knapp, looked for some chemical that might relax this kind of spasm.

They tried prostigmine. In 20 cases, prostigmine apparently was a distinct help. Some deformities that had become well set either decreased or disappeared. These doctors think the drug acts on the spinal cord, which is one seat of the paralysis.

They said many more trials are necessary and this summer's epidemics may offer a good testing ground.

There are other ways in which 1943 finds the American medical profession much farther along than in 1934. Then it was thought likely that people caught the disease through the nerves of smell. Now it is believed the infection enters through the mouth and alimentary canal. Infection has been traced to sewage. Flies have been found to carry it.

Despite identification of fly carriers, the agent or agents that spread it are still unidentified. Something connected with summer is the malefactor, and the search is still as wide as all outdoors.

Nearly two years ago Doctors Claud W. Jungeblutt and Murray Sanders, of Columbia university, reported success in developing a vaccine which protected monkeys. But no human applications have been reported. Other likely-looking vaccine experiments also have been reported.

Must Isolate Virus

The vaccine has to be made from the cause of the infection, which is supposed to be a virus. A virus is an organism which resembles a molecule more than it does a living germ. It would help if someone could isolate this virus. Success seems close. Both in Sweden and here researchers have detected long, thread-like or wiry organisms which may be the virus.

This agent appears to be one of the tiniest, and for its size most deadly of disease agents. At the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Columbia university, where the virus was obtained in almost pure form, the infinitesimal quantity of three quadrillionths of a gram was enough to give a mouse a fatal dose. This is about equivalent to saying that 180 molecules of the infective stuff can kill a mouse.

There is a great deal else. One puzzling fact turned up in University of Pennsylvania experiments on animals: Those deficient in vitamin "B" did not catch the disease as readily as animals fully up on their needs of this vitamin.

This does not mean that vitamins add to the risk of infantile paralysis. It is merely part of a growing mosaic of facts. One certainty is that if the 1943 epidemics spread widely the medical profession will emerge with a better understanding of the puzzles.

Presumably Hull and Eden met prior to the dinner for preliminary talks. Each had political experts with him—Hull was accompanied by James C. Dunn, a state department authority on international affairs.

The arrival of the white-haired, soft-voiced secretary of state came off in the established manner of all such events here. He had nothing to say about his purposes in Quebec and quickly slid into a limousine that delivered him over the ancient cobbles into the guarded confines of the Chateau Frontenac, scene of the conferences.

A reporter asked him for comment on the meeting.

"I'm just up here to find out." Hull said.

Stumpy Cleo Shans Picnic For Ruffin

Nek York, Aug. 20, (AP)—In spite of a performance as lackadisical as a guy on a Sunday picnic, Bobby Ruffin had too much reach and boxing skill for Cleo Shans, the stumpy Los Angeles negro, and won an easy ten-round decision tonight in Madiso Square Garden. Ruffin scaled 133, Shans 134¾.

Although Shans, who was a late substitution for Sal Bortolo, was the aggressor virtually throughout the Ruffin was on a back-pedaling bicycle most of the way, the Long Island lightweight was rarely in trouble and semed to be fighting only when and as much as he had to in taking the feature event of the first Garden fight show since June 11.
